United On Strike

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of passengers scheduled to fly on United Airlines today were grounded or looking for other means of travel after machinists went on strike against the largest U.S. air carrier.

The airline cancelled all flights until April 10 after the Machinists union, which represents 18,000 employees, including mechanics, flight dispatchers and ramp and service workers, went on strike at 12:01 a.m. EST today.

A cost-of-living clause is the key unresolved issue, a union official said. No new negotiations were scheduled.

It's a Waiting Game At Stricken Reactor

ABSORBING
RADIATION!

FUNNY SIDE to the Three Mile Island radiation leak is seen by youthful trio who rode nearby in an open convertible. But the jest may turn out to be not so funny as they were taking their ride at a time when residents had been warned to stay indoors

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Scientists struggled to cool down the stricken Three Mile Island nuclear power plant today, while officials assured the area's 130,000 residents that chances of a catastrophic melt-down were "very remote."

The potential disaster has developed into a waiting game and it will be several days before the final decision is made on how to solve the crucial problem of avoiding a melt-down, and perhaps months before the problem is entirely cleaned up.

"There were no surprises throughout the night," said Walter Creitz, president of Metropolitan Edison, one of a consortium of utilities that runs the plant.

"The venting is continuing," he said. "We're maintaining the temperature. We don't want to lower the temperature because that would lower the pressure and increase the size of the bubble." He was referring to a bubble of radioactive vapor that is threatening the reactor's core.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh said at a news conference late Friday that no general evacuation of the area is necessary "at this time." However, he repeated his recommendation that young children and pregnant women living within eight kilometres of the plant leave the area.

But many of the 130,000 people who live within 16 kilometres of the plant, located on an island in the Susquehanna River near Harrisburg, packed their belongings and left anyway.

At midmorning, radiation was still being vented into the atmosphere at the Susquehanna River plant site, said George Troffer, a plant official. Officials of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) had said they hoped to halt the releases sometime today.

At a morning briefing at NRC headquarters in Washington, NRC official Jim Hanchett said lead bricks were being sent to the Harrisburg site for use in a shield around a device called a "hydrogen recombiner" in an auxiliary building.

When the shield is completed, officials will begin pulling hydrogen from the containment building into the recombiner, which "burns the hydrogen and makes it back into water."

At the tiny community of Goldsboro, which sits several hundred yards from the plant, Mayor Kenneth Myers said, "It looks like a ghost town now," after three-fourths of the 600 residents moved out.

Harold Denton, an operations director for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) sent here by President Carter, said the possibility of a melt-down of the nuclear core was "very remote." But he termed the mishap, "easily the most serious accident in the licensed reactor program."

It will be several days before the final decision is made on how to siphon off the bubble hovering in a sealed reactor dome and perhaps months before the problem is entirely cleaned up, Denton said.

The mysterious malfunction at the plant, which has been in operation just three months, prompted Carter to say Friday that it will probably lead to stricter safety standards for nuclear facilities.

Gov. Thornburgh, who stayed in constant contact with the White House through the day, had ordered the closing of 23 schools within an eight-kilometre radius of the disabled plant after the first burst of radioactivity was reported at 9 a.m. Friday.

If the bubble keeps growing it poses a two-pronged dilemma:

It might expose the core's tip, exposing its 177 uranium rods. Denton said up to 50 per cent of the fuel elements may have been damaged when the initial accident occurred before dawn Wednesday.

It might also force the plant's primary cooling system to vapor lock, making the core so hot the uranium would melt.

Either would lead to a melt-down, an uncontrolled reaction that might burn it's way through the reactor's floor and into the earth while spewing vast amounts of radiation.

Nuclear Power Dealt Major Blow

By J. P. SMITH
The Washington Post
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON — Whatever the direct damage caused by the accident at Three Mile Island nuclear plant, the political consequences for the American atomic power industry could be profound.

The Pennsylvania incident is the latest in a series of episodes that may undermine the years of assurances by the industry and its governmental allies that a major accident of Three Mile Island proportions could not occur.

In recent months:

—Five nuclear power plants on the East Coast have been shut down because their resistance to earthquake damage was determined to be insufficient.

—The Nuclear Regulatory Commission repudiated the Rasmussen report, a major, government-commissioned study of atomic safety that concluded the risk of nuclear disaster is very small.

—The trial opened in a suit brought by the estate of Karen Silkwood, a plutonium plant worker killed in an auto crash, in which a

DUNCAN — RCMP are investigating the murder of Loretta Peters, 32, whose body was found at 5:30 a.m. today in her Tzouhalem Road home. Police gave no details but were conducting a helicopter search of the area for a suspect.

Complete Boycott for Egypt

Meet The Stars

Jane Fonda has won the Academy Award only once although in recent years she has become a perennial nominee.

She won for Klute in 1971 and her subsequent nominations include her performance one year ago in Julia.

Fonda started in movies in 1960 and quickly attracted some prominent co-stars including Lee Marvin who won an Oscar opposite her in Cat Ballou in 1965 and Robert Redford who became a box office hit with her for Barefoot in the Park in 1967.

Although popular for her art, Fonda became controversial during the 1960s for her militant stand against U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Ironcially, she has been nominated this year for Coming Home, which is about the Vietnam war.

Her chances may depend upon the attitude of the Academy of Arts and Science towards her political activities, although her recent spate of nominations appears to suggest that all has been forgiven. Her performance in Coming Home was first rate.

Readers who correctly predict the Oscar winner for best actress, best actor and best movie, as awarded on April 9, will be entered for a chance to win a trip for two Hollywood or one of five major runner-up prizes in the annual Times-VI/90 Visit the Stars contest.

Official entry form is printed today on page 32.

BAGHDAD, Iraq - Hardline and moderate Arabs broke their deadlock today and agreed to a complete economic boycott of Egypt and an eventual break in all diplomatic relations with President Anwar Sadat's government, conference sources reported.

The reported agreement, reached on the fifth day of negotiations, indicated the conservative bloc led by Saudi Arabia has acceded to almost all the hardline demands for sanctions against Sadat for signing a peace treaty with Israel.

A member of the Kuwaiti delegation announced the accord to journalists, and other conference sources confirmed the report, which came as a suprise to many observers who thought the radical-moderate split seemed irreparable.

The sources said the 18 countries in the Arab League attending the conference and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) have agreed to:

—Stop all Arab aid to Egypt. A proposal to withdraw all Arab official and private investments from Egyptian banks was dropped on grounds that the Sadat government likely would seize them.

—Immediately withdraw all ambassadors from Cairo. Jordan already has done so, as have the hardline regimes of Syria, Libya, Algeria, South Yemen and the PLO.

—A complete cut in government-to-government relations with Egypt at the time of each country's choosing. A Saudi journalist said this was an insistence of the conservative Persian Gulf states which wanted the option of choosing the time of a diplomatic cutoff, although the hardliners wanted an immediate total break.

King Khaled of Saudi Arabia has said his country will end relations with Egypt "the day the Israeli flag flies over Cairo," a Saudi reporter said. The flag is expected to fly when Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin visits Cairo.

Economists in Cairo believe Egypt could survive a reduction of aid from oil-producing states and that trade embargoes would have little impact, since less than 10 per cent of Egypt's trade is with Arab countries.

But the economists feel Egypt would be seriously hurt if the oil-rich states withdrew bank deposits in Egyptian banks, estimated at more than $2 billion.

Meanwhile, President Sadat today returned to Cairo where millions of cheering Egyptians greeted him in what officials said was a people's endorsement of the peace treaty with Israel. Sadat was met by a 21-gun salute as he emerged from his Boeing 707, smiling and waving to crowds.

Prices Up for Butter, Cheese, Milk Powder

OTTAWA (CP) — Butter, skim milk powder and cheese are going to cost more next week in light of a federal decision to increase prices paid to dairy farmers.

The announcement rushed out by the agriculture department Friday, two days before the new dairy year starts, represents a small pay raise but little else for farmers who produce milk for dairy products. Dairy policy announcements often come after the start of the new dairy year.

Table milk is regulated by the provinces and is not affected by the federal announcement. However, fluid producers apply pressure to the provinces for more money.

Butter will cost five cents a pound more and skim milk powder three cents a pound extra. Ice cream and cheese prices also will be higher.

A Locked Guard for Press

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Tight security will prevail at the legislature Monday as reporters are handed their advance copies of Premier Bill Bennett's "dynamite" budget.

Not since 1971 when W. A. C. Bennett refused the press the courtesy of traditional advance copies have such security measures surrounded a budget.

To give the press a chance to analyze the budget and prepare their stories, they are usually given copies ahead of time on the understanding no stories are released until the finance minister presents the budget to the house.

It's usually all done on the trust system.

But this year, Bennett has lost that trust.

The press will still get copies of the budget speech at 9 a.m.

But this time around, they will be locked under guard in the press gallery so not even a breath of what's in the budget will be released until it is presented to the legislature. (Full details of the budget will be carried in the final edition of Monday's Times which will appear for street sales soon after 3 p.m.)

The security hokum surrounding the budget is designed to whet journalistic — and hopefully, the public appetite for the "goodies" Finance Minister Evan Wolfe will unveil.

The Bennett administration has carefully trickled out vague hints and snatches of the budget contents in what is seen as an apparent prelude to a May election.

The fact that election speculation rumors won't die despite the federal election set for May 22 seems surprising at first, but the precedent has been set.

In 1949, B.C. went to the polls June 15, followed 12 days later by a national ballot.

Most political observers feel Bennett wanted to avoid parallel election campaigns at all costs.

But it is believed Bennett was too deep into his own election scenario when Prime Minister Trudeau made his surprise announcement Monday that he was going earlier than expected.

Most political observers are still predicting the budget will explode into an election a day or two after its introduction.

If Bennett drops the writ Tuesday or Wednesday or later that week at the Socred convention in Kamloops, B.C. will go to the polls the week of May 14, just one week ahead of the federal government.

The lengthy budget document that will take Wolfe in excess of two hours to read.

Royal Raise in Pay

LONDON (AP) — Some members of the Royal Family will get pay increases to cover the rising cost of attending public functions, Denis Healey, chancellor of the exchequer, told the House of Commons on Friday.

The total increase in state allowances will be more than £214,000 ($514,000), or 8.9 per cent — higher than the government's five-per-cent pay-raise guideline, but below the average obtained by labor unions during a winter of strikes and industrial unrest.

The allocation to the Queen goes up by £174,000 ($417,600) a year to £2.1 million ($5.1 million) and the allowance for her husband, Prince Philip, by £4,500 ($10,800) to £98,000 ($235,200).

Tanzanians Pushed Back

NAIROBI (AP) — Libyan troops fighting for Ugandan President Idi Amin have pushed Tanzanians and Ugandan exile invaders beyond artillery range of Kampala after three days of shelling, diplomatic sources said today. Radio Uganda said the "enemy is in retreat."

The diplomats in Kampala, reached by telephone, said they have visited Natete, an important road junction 10 kilometres southwest of the Ugandan capital, and saw no evidence of fighting. The invaders had been reported this week about six kilometres southwest of Natete and about 16 kilometres from the capital itself.

The range of Tanzanian 122-mm artillery is believed to be 20 kilometres.

The information supported reports from residents that Kampala has been quiet since Friday night for the first time in several days. Residents said some shops have reopened, and some Ugandans who fled through the week were coming back.

Radio Uganda reported that Ugandan armed forces have launched a counter-offensive and that the "enemy is retreating." The broadcast said the defenders have captured two mortars and killed 25 invaders, including one mercenary.

The radio said the rest fled, leaving behind arms and ammunition. Ugandan soldiers were reported chasing them.

Although the radio gave credit to Ugandan troops, diplomats in Kampala said it was an "open secret" that the defence was being waged exclusively by a force of 2,000 Libyans.

Tax Dodging Fine $296,000

The largest fine in Canadian tax history was levelled Friday against a Toronto father and son who charged yachting expenses, fur coats, jewellery and southern holidays to their company expense accounts. Harry Hershoran and his son David, chairman and vice-president respectively of Hillcrest General Leasing Ltd, were fined $296,278.78. Revenue Canada charged the two men and their company evaded total taxes of $237,023.03 on suppressed income of $569,158.90 during the 1974 and 1975 taxation years.

Newspaper heiress and kidnap victim Patricia Hearst will marry the man hired to protect her life Sunday in a Navy chapel on Treasure Island in San Francisco Bay. The Rev. Ted Dumke, an Episcopal minister who headed a committee to free Miss Hearst from prison, will marry the couple in a private chapel behind the Navy base's chainlink fence. Miss Hearst, 25, met her policeman beau, Bernard Shaw, 33, in 1976 while he was moonlighting as her prison bodyguard.

Also hearing wedding bells is Willie Carter Spann, who calls himself the black sheep of President Carter's family. He plans to marry at a California state prison, where he is serving time for armed robbery. The 32-year-old Spann, whose mother is the president's sister Gloria, has received permission to marry 41-year-old Jane Frey of San Francisco, who describes herself as an insurance worker.

And among those who have lost the bliss in wedded life are Tom Cossitt, who was Progressive Conservative MP for Leeds in the last House, and his wife, Johanna. They were granted a decree absolute in a Brockville, Ont., divorce court Friday, ending their 14-year marriage. Both parties had alleged physical and mental cruelty.

Setting some sort of a record, a 90-year-old Brazilian farmer has divorced his wife on grounds of incompatibility after more than 65 years of marriage, 12 children, 50 grandchildren and 36 great-grandchildren. Farmer Ramao Bitencourt, 90, told a Porto Alegre court that he and his 78-year-old wife, Iduarina, simply had incompatible temperaments. Ramao did not say whether he plans to remarry.

A Toronto man and his wife had a champagne dinner with friends from Calgary — and neither couple left their home town. Instead, Rod Oram and Richard Osler rented Bell Canada's conference television for $230 Friday night so the two couples could see each other while they dined. Lynn Oram and Cathy Osler accompanied their husbands to the telephone company buildings in Toronto and Calgary without knowing the true reason. When the screens came on, they found themselves sitting across from one another as though in one room.

After more than 300 hours on the air, Bill Tinsley, a 20-year-old disc jockey, was still "going strong" Friday afternoon. "I guess I'll keep going until they carry me out of here on a stretcher." Tinsley, at the microphone for WATN in Waterton, N.Y., since March 17, said several days ago.

Iran Landslide Will End 2,500 Years of Monarchy

Times News Services

TEHRAN — An overwhelming majority of Iranians voted to replace 2,500 years of monarchy with an Islamic Republic in a two-day referendum, election officials said today.

But Iran's government radio said armed tribesmen representing several restless ethnic minorities attacked polling stations in towns scattered around the country. The radio said no one was injured in the attacks.

Interior Minister Ahmad Sadr Haj Syed Javadi announced that the voting had been extended by four hours, but election officials said reports from across Iran indicated a huge majority had voted for the Islamic Republic.

In some cities and towns, only a handful of votes were cast against the projected republic although the blueprint for the changeover from a traditional monarchy still remains a closely guarded secret.

Thousands of Iranians lined up outside polling stations in Tehran and the provincial cities to cast their votes amid traffic jams and crowds of officegoers who returned to work after the Moslem sabbath.

The polling was proceeding peacefully in most areas, but in Tehran, unidentified gunmen opened fire at voters lining up at polling stations Friday. No casualties were reported in three separate attacks and revolutionary guards made numerous arrests.

A SAVAK secret police agent was arrested in Tehran on a charge of plotting to sabotage the referendum on orders of Iran's former ambassador to Washington, Ardeshir Zahedi, a close friend of deposed Shah Mohammed Riza Pahlevi.

Iranian press reports said Mashaallah Mohajeri was recognized and arrested when he tried to carry away ballot boxes from a polling station in Tehran at the end of the voting Friday.

In the northeastern city of Gonbad-E-Qavous, 300 miles west of Tehran, polling was interrupted by renewed clashes between Turkoman tribesmen and government forces.

Sources said the revolutionary government sent Islamic militiamen to reinforce troops fighting the Turkoman rebels. Government forces blocked roads leading to the city and cut telephone communications.

There were no details of the fighting and no casualty figures were available. Earlier reports said at least 50 persons were killed in the first days of fighting.

The rebels took up arms last Monday to push their demands for autonomy for Gorgan Province, where about 500,000 of the minority tribesmen live. Government negotiators sent to work out a truce with the rebels have so far failed to halt the fighting.

In Tehran, the newspaper Ayandegan today published what it said were early official results from 11 small provincial towns, which showed 09.7 per cent of voters there backing the Islamic state proposed by Moslem holy man Ayatollah Khomeini, architect of the anti-shah rebellion.

Results so far represent the votes of 3.5 per cent of the 12 million Iranians taking part in the vote which began Friday and ends today, the newspaper said.

Alcoholism Soars Across Britain

LONDON (UPI) — Britons are drinking nearly twice as much as they were 30 years ago — and not surprisingly, the number of alcoholics is rising all the time.

At a Conference on Alcohol and Industry in Liverpool, Dr. Anthony Thorley said Britain's per capita consumption of alcohol had risen 80 percent between 1950 and 1976.

"We are all drinking more," Thorley, consultant psychiatrist at the Alcohol and Drug Dependence unit, said Thursday. "And more of us are becoming excessive drinkers or dependent on drink."

Alcohol dependence is not just a middle-aged "illness", Dr. Thorley warned. "Youngsters under 16 are regularly admitted to my hospital."

An alcoholism expert at another conference said, however, that dependence on drink is not necessarily harmful.

The ordinary man likes his drink and indeed, his life would be poorer without it, Dr. David Davies told the Royal Society of Health's Eastbourne Congress.

Drinkers do not become alcoholics until they down 10 shots of hard liquor, five or six pints of beer, or 1.5 bottles of wine a day, Davies said.

Is an election coming?

The rumors of an imminent provincial election are so widespread that it is impossible to walk down Douglas Street without bumping into one. They vary in detail — Premier Bill Bennett may call it Tuesday, or Wednesday, or Friday; election day may be May 10, May 11, May 14 or May 17 — but the essential theory is always the same:

The government will bring down its budget on Monday. It has been described as containing "dynamite" and will be surrounded by the tightest secrecy precautions taken in B.C. in years. A few minutes, hours or days after Finance Minister Evan Wolfe has finished reading the document, Bennett will introduce an interim supply bill so the government can keep on paying its bills for the next few months. As soon as the House passes that bill, the premier will go to Government House, have the lieutenant-governor dissolve the legislature and call the election.

Because provincial campaigns need be only 38 days long, compared to 57 for federal campaigns, the B.C. election will be over a few days before everyone goes to the federal polls.

At first glance it seems an unlikely scenario because tradition has it that federal and provincial campaigns do not run at the same time. Yet on further examination, it is easy to understand why Bennett might find it an exceedingly astute game plan.

First, the budget. There is no question but that the budget is geared to a quick election. Bennett has been building up surpluses for two years now, and this is the time to return them to the people through a variety of giveaway programs. At the same time it is expected Bennett will be able to demonstrate lots of "restraint" and "fiscal responsibility" by holding the over-all increase in the provincial budget to a whisker under five per cent.

It is rumored that the actual operating budgets of many departments have been held to the same level as the 1978 budget, and that nearly all the five per cent increase will go on vote-getting giveaway programs. That would normally mean service cuts in many of the ordinary programs, but the suggestion is about that ministers have been told not to worry too much, that the situation could be improved later in the year — after the election.

None of that, however, is likely to be considered "dynamite," even by the government's most optimistic advisers. A more dramatic step yet is needed to qualify for such strong talk.

One possibility would be a significant cut in the sales tax, but the more popular theory is that the premier will use the vehicle of the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation (BCRIC) to offer a major goodie to the people. A takeover of Westcoast Transmission is one suggestion, but even more appealing is the idea of a takeover of controlling interest in the much-hated, privately-owned B.C. Telephone Co.

If the speculation is wrong and the premier is not going to call an election next week, some of these goodies would probably be delayed a few months. Another widely-held rumor is that two budgets — one for an election, one a standard-issue budget — have already been prepared, and Bennett will decide this weekend which he will use on Monday.

The second advantage Bennett would have in calling the election now would be the use he could make of the federal campaign, especially the issue of national unity. Under this theory a major theme of Bennett's campaign would be the need to send the next federal government, be it Liberal or Tory, a message that the west must have its proper place in Confederation and must not always be subjected to the interests of central Canada. Handled properly, Bennett could use this theme to develop an image of a statesman rather than that of a politician.

The third reason Bennett might want to call an election now is because of the difficulties the other parties would find themselves in. Having no federal wing to worry about, the Socreds could devote themselves — and their money — entirely to the provincial campaign. A few of their workers who are committed federal Liberals or Tories might desert to concentrate on the federal campaign, but that would be the only difficulty the parallel campaigns would cause them.

The NDP, on the other hand, would be faced with the difficulty of splitting its already thin financial resources among 28 federal seats and 57 provincial seats. Although their workers could canvass for two candidates simultaneously, it is unlikely there would be enough money to run 85 really good campaigns.

The situation is even worse for the poor Tories and Liberals, whose federal workers would undoubtedly desert in droves to work for the Socreds provincially. The sight of federal Tory or Liberal signs and provincial Socred signs on the same lawns would probably advance Bennett's message that the Socreds are the only real private-enterprise alternative in B.C.

All this may never come to pass. Prime Minister Trudeau, for instance, had the country speculating just this wildly at least twice in the past two years before backing away at the last moment. In hindsight, he would have done better to have gone when he was higher in the polls, almost two years ago.

But Bennett has observed that scenario and may decide that he will not make the same mistake. He might well be right in a decision that there won't be a better time for him to go than now.

Victoria city council: Too many rivalries

Continuing a look at some of the local councils and boards for 1979, attention is turned this week towards Victoria city council.

Logically speaking, there should be no reason to discuss Victoria this year. After all, it held no elections last fall because it had moved to a system of biennial elections in 1977. The nine members of council are exactly the same this year as they were last.

Despite that, however, there have been significant changes in the dynamics of the council this year. The reason, it is apparent, has not to do with last year's election but with this year's — more precisely the race for the mayoralty scheduled for November.

Mayor Mike Young has said repeatedly he does not plan to run for re-election, leaving the field open for ambitious aldermen to begin preparing their campaigns. Recently Young's statements have taken on added weight with speculation, entirely unconfirmed by him, that he might run in the next provincial election, though it is not clear for which party (Social Credit or Conservative). If this speculation were to be well-founded and if Premier Bennett were to call a spring election (both very big ifs, it is true), the mayoralty candidates might even find themselves in a campaign within two or three months.

During the 1977 elections in which Young was easily re-elected, four of the current aldermen expressed interest in succeeding him. They were Murray Glazier, Ron McKenzie, Bill Tindall and Bob Wright. Since then Wright seems to have definitely dropped out of the contest and McKenzie has not shown much recent interest. Ald. John Hayes, who showed no interest in 1977, has dropped a couple of hints that he might consider running if conditions were right in the autumn.

By far the leading contenders at the moment, however, are Glazier and Tindall, and it is the rivalry between them that is frequently affecting the over-all performance of council.

It is no secret that most current council members would prefer Tindall to Glazier as the next mayor. Indeed several of them have taken such a dislike to Glazier that they would probably vote for Godzilla in preference to him. The main reason for this is Glazier's blatant political ambition, which they find somewhat overpowering.

(Glazier has also moved into the front line of fire this year by taking on the chairmanship of the Capital Regional Board. The city and the regional have a traditional history of conflict, and regional directors from Victoria proper have frequently had to decide between parochial interests and regional concerns. A Victoria alderman who, as chairman of the regional board, must always support the regional concerns, is a prime target for sniping from others on Victoria council.)

Ironically, however, it has often seemed in recent weeks that it is Glazier's opponents and not Glazier who are making decisions based primarily on political considerations. A group on council, led by Wright, appears to have as a prime goal the defeat of Glazier on every vote, and will oppose any of his suggestions almost automatically. Moreover, some of them, notably Wright and often Young, will also take the opportunity to swipe at Glazier practically every time they open their mouths.

Young, who in previous years, was quite patient with Glazier and appeared to respect his financial expertise, has become one of his strongest opponents.

Tindall finds himself in an admirable position. He need never bother looking undignified or impolite by attacking his chief rival; all his friends are doing it for him.

Needless to say, this constant rivalry has not improved the decision-making in the city. Far too much energy is spent in playing these unnecessary political games, and sometimes it seems that the judgment of council members on issues is affected.

This is a pity because in other ways, council is doing excellently. The reforms to make city business more open to the public, brought in last year by the "new-broom" aldermen, Bill McElroy and Robin Blencoe, have become almost second nature to all involved. Both McElroy and Blencoe have learned a fair amount about functioning within the political system, have produced a number of creative and innovative ideas, and are providing a good balance on council. Virtually all the council members are bright, articulate and hard-working.

If all aldermen could just forget about political ambitions and rivalries for the next six months, Victoria council could have a most productive and successful summer. — B.McL.

Clark surfs in on a wave

OTTAWA — Joe Clark approaches press conferences with the guarded resolution of a game but inexperienced surfer. You keep expecting him to get wiped out only he doesn't, and by the conference's close, which is the surfer's equivalent of making it to shore still upright, he's become cocky enough to do a few tricks.

The ritual formal press conference by which each candidate opens his campaign — Pierre Trudeau on Wednesday morning, Clark the same afternoon, New Democrat Ed Broadbent still to come — is for each of them as tough a trial as they'll endure between now and election day.

In the ground floor theatre of the National Press Building, the candidate sits alone behind a rather utilitarian desk, a glass of iced water beside him, and faces up at half a dozen television cameras and more than 100 reporters all hoping he'll commit some irredeemable verbal blunder which will give them a fat, juicy story.

Flat and snappish

When he's in form, Trudeau uses these affairs to jump reporters through whichever verbal hoops he chooses to toss into the air. He is by turns, intimidating, deft, evasive, witty, and at all times full of guile. This time, Trudeau was off form, low-key, flat, alternately rambling and snappish. Give him a five out of 10.

Clark's nervousness showed as soon as he sat down. He drummed his fingers on the desk until, realizing it, he found other things for them to do — taking notes, unnecessarily so, while a reporter asked a question, or tapping two index fingers against his chin as if as a reminder to sit up straight.

Clark seldom is in form at these affairs. He's best in one-on-one interviews where he can use his humor, or in the Commons where he's quick enough on his feet to cope with Trudeau, as few others can. At full-scale press conferences, Clark looks up at a phalanx of reporters, most of them more skeptical than most voters whether he has the heft and stature to be prime minister — because they knew him as a backbench MP, because they lost their luggage flying with him around the world, or because they are looking for, as Clark once put it, "a Pierre Trudeau without his warts." A different man but the same style.

Clark's opening statement was crafted out of quotable one-liners. His voice even, but strained, Clark took off after Trudeau, "who believes Canada can't do better", "who thinks he is the only good Canadian".

This, though, was the easy part — Clark playing his own music rather than dancing to the tunes of the reporters.

His statement done, in English and French, Clark leaned forward to catch the questions. His fingers drummed on the desk.

JOE CLARK
. . . nervous, but game

A reporter asked about Clark's stimulative deficit? "There would be a very short period during which it would be longer, I mean larger, than it is now," Clark replied.

A bumpy passage through that one, followed by a high, curling wave that could wipe him out. Clark had said, a reporter began, he would "talk tough" to Exxon, which had cut back its oil supplies to Canada. What, specifically, did he in fact mean?

Clark blinked. He didn't, it was obvious, know specifically what he meant. Nothing new in this: politicians often don't know what they mean by something they've just said. The test — it's of their ability to cope with anything rather than of their ability to know everything — is whether they can fake it. Keep their balance on the board.

Clark wobbled. He replied that he would make plain to Exxon that Ottawa would apply against it its "full panoply of powers".

Up popped another reporter. Which specific powers could Clark apply against an oil multinational? "Laws of general application which could be applied specifically," he replied.

A third reporter was on his feet. Which, specific, general laws?

Clark reached into his memory. Environmental regulations, for instance, which, in the instance of Exxon alone, "could be more strongly applied". Likewise, export permits, which Exxon might suddenly find hard to get.

Six out of 10

Thus, would-be prime ministers aren't supposed to admit in public they'd discipline a recalcitrant corporation by selectively applying general laws. Yet it's the way, behind closed doors, "tough talk" in fact gets translated into action. Anyway, these are details. All that mattered, to Clark, was that he had stayed on his feet.

Two-thirds of the way through the conference, Clark realized he'd made it. The media "heavies" had asked their hardest questions. By now, younger reporters were taking up the air time, but with soft inquiries.

Clark no longer moved his fingers. He leaned back in his chair. He took an easy question — if victorious, how quickly would he call Parliament? — and turned it to his own use. "Not for three or four months. Governments don't change often, not often enough, in this country. It's going to take time for the cabinet to be fully cognizant of all the problems, and to send new signals to the public service."

He was close to shore, composed enough now to try a few tricks. Give him, oh, say, six out of 10.

Education debate

I would like to respond to some of the comments regarding my recent letters on the subject of education. At the same time, I suggest that one of the major stumbling blocks in the way of improving our schooling system is the determined effort being made by members of the establishment to persuade critics that there is no problem.

Even as I write, I hear on CBC radio an earnest comment from a school principal who is busy claiming that increased failures to pass basic tests are due to more difficult questions and tougher marking. He is also saying that the only fair way to mark students is against each other and not against performance. In other words if you perform well in class of high performers, you can fail; if you perform poorly in a class of low performers, you can pass! It is really hard to find an intelligent entry point into that kind of dialogue.

In answer to Mr. Calkins of the teachers' association, I would be pleased to visit some of our local schools and invite him to arrange it and go with me. I should add that I have spent hundreds of hours with the teaching profession (including my daughter) discussing the educational scene and most of my comments arise from their input.

I challenge the teachers' association and Greater Victoria school board to obtain the anonymous views from all district teachers as to their major concerns on education and their comments on what actions are needed to improve our schooling system — and then to publish the results in the press. Why not ask the same question of the three senior grades of students?

To set the record straight, my statement on ignoring basics related to adequate priority and classroom time. Of course "new math" is not now significantly different from "old math" because after 15 years of costly experiment, "new math" has now largely been abandoned. I did not, of course, say that students could not express a coherent thought — I said half of them could not — a difference of infinite value.

Mr. Calkins accused me of offering no solutions or reasons why the system is in trouble. Well now, how about that! I've been writing and speaking on this subject for more years than I care to contemplate and have outlined with tedious repetition causes and solutions. Unfortunately, when I read his statement, "The challenge society and teachers face now is how to make schools more meaningful to the ever-increasing numbers forced to attend" I just don't know what to say. In the last few years the student population in Greater Victoria has dropped by 10,000 — a decrease of one-third. Furthermore, "meaningful" is not meaningful and in any event is not the problem.

I would be happy to debate the real issues with the teachers' association at any time. Yes, I really do understand that our tattered society is a significant part of the problem and that standards in Victoria are relatively commendable. — Ian Cass, 3811 Merriman Drive.

FRANCO-FACTS: FRANCO-FUN

By Raoul

Here is how six million Canadians sing our National Anthem, as you've probably heard during televised hockey games. Notice the meaning does not parallel the English at all. By the way, the French version came first; composed by a French-Canadian. This was in the last century, which helps explain the themes:

O CANADA

O Canada, terre de nos aïeux,
O Canada, land of our forbears,
Ton front est cient de fleurons glorieux,
Thy brow is girded with glorious flowerets,
Car ton bras sait porter l'épée,
For thine arm knows (how) to carry the sword.
Il sait porter la croix!
It knows (how) to carry the cross!
Ton histoire est une épopée
Thy history is an epic
Des plus brillants exploits! . . . etc.
Of the most brilliant exploits! . . .

Fool the voters

The Social Credit party does not own B.C. They are merely the agents acting for the people. What right do they have to give us what already belongs to us at a cost of millions of dollars?

It is only a two-pronged fork to stick the stupid and the greedy.

First off, it is a blatantly obvious scheme to fool the stupid electorate into voting for their party. And secondly, it is obvious that the majority of the shares are going to end up eventually in the hands of those who already have all the money. Thus this government is underhandedly selling off public industry to private industry.

I for one will take no part in robbing future generations because of blind greed and stupidity. — Mrs. E. Browne, 382 W. Burnside.

Logical step

I understand that the former premier of B.C., Dave Barrett, has decided to accept the offered shares in BCRIC, sell them and donate the proceeds to the NDP party. This sounds like a logical procedure to me as most of the companies that make up the British Columbia Resources Investment Corporation were created by the NDP in the first place.

In as much as I feel the NDP party is more concerned with the interest of the average citizen, it may be assumed that the average citizen will benefit from this act.

I have therefore decided to follow Mr. Barrett's example with the exception that I plan to keep about one-third of the proceeds for myself. — Leslie A. Priestley, 5-1321 Broad Street.

How to end the annual slaughter

By RICHARD ADAMS

(Adams is a British novelist who wrote Watership Down and The Plague Dogs. This article appeared in The Observer.)

Mother harp seal returns to body of her pup after it was killed and skinned Annually, obeying age-old instinct, the harp seal herds migrate from Baffin Bay and Hudson Bay to the Newfoundland ice. Here, in February and March, the cows bear their pups — one each, like other large mammals, including humans. Native to the bitter solitude, they suckle and tend their young.

One day, when the pup is about 14 days old, a man approaches. The cow, clumsy and helpless out of water, is driven off and the man batters the pup with a club, turns it over, slits it from throat to anus and strips the pelt, blubber and one flipper. These he drags away, leaving the cow sniffing the guts on the ice. Every year, 100,000 to 150,000 pups die in this way — probably about one-third of the number born.

This, says the Canadian govenment (which fixes a quota), is a harvest of a natural resource. One Newfoundland minister has said that it resembles picking a crop of oranges. The principal product is the fur. Since few people nowadays wear sealskin, this is used mostly for trinkets — trimming ski-jackets, purses, car-key rings, and for model seal paperweights and similar toys.

Fur disguised

Some fur is dyed and disguised before sale. The blubber oil, a by-product, is used for margarine and chocolate. The flippers go to restaurants. A pelt's value is about $20, though the killers get less. The Canadian government says they average $200 to $300 during the five-week season.

The entire industry does not comprise many people — a few thousand altogether, Canadian and Norwegian. It is not a full-time occupation or anything like the principal livelihood of the sealers. The financial yield represents substantially less than 0.1 per cent of total Newfoundland income. It is a seasonal occupation at a time of year when there is little else to do. It makes a few dollars. It has done so for the last 300 years.

Sealers fall into three groups. Norwegians, licensed by Canada, kill perhaps 15 per cent of the quota. Licensed Canadian ships kill about 35 per cent. The remaining 50 per cent are killed by "landsmen" — Newfoundlanders operating on their own initiative. The terrain comprises the Front and the Back. The Front is the Atlantic ice off Newfoundland, reached by ship. The Back, "hunted" by landsmen, is the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the Strait of Belle Isle.

If the slaughter stopped, the human race would be no worse off, and no one would be ruined or even much poorer. Why isn't it stopped?

Newfoundland is a bleak country and its people live tough, independent lives, regarding even Canada as alien and not considering themselves Canadian. Values change at different speeds in different places. Great Britain has illegalized steel traps and rabbit wires. To us the seal-hunt is a nasty anachronism. Newfoundlanders see it differently. There, everyone is either a sealer or descended from a sealer. To them, our indignation is sentimental and we know nothing of true hardship.

In Canada this February, the RSPCA team, of which I was a member, found considerable opposition to the slaughter in Vancouver, Ottawa and Toronto. But no government representatives offered to discuss it with us. Why should they? Canadian politics are finely balanced. Neither party can afford to forfeit Newfoundland's support.

How do they defend a business that any dispassionate observer must feel is horribly cruel? (Supervision across the vast ice is impracticable; and how can any "hunter" guarantee humane slaughter 100,000 times in such conditions? Anyway, what about the suffering to the cows?) The arguments (now all-too-familiar to the RSPCA) amount to five.

1. It is a traditional part of national culture. The ice is a controlled slaughter-house.
2. It is economically justifiable, since it yields money.
3. The seals eat too many fish.
4. The suffering involved is not as severe as argued.
5. Non-Newfoundlanders have no first-hand experience. They should come and live rough themselves.

Each of these arguments (except No. 3) was used 120 years ago to defend slavery in America, and they were all true. Yet slavery was abolished, because world opinion felt that its price, in self-respect, was too high.

The ice is not a controlled, but an uncontrolled, haphazard slaughterhouse; and who kills two-week-old lambs and calves by clubbing and then disembowelling them before the mother's eyes? As to fish consumption, the truth is that no one yet knows, accurately, exactly what fish harp seals do eat, or how much. (If anyone has depleted world stocks, it is man. How about the seals diminishing the humans? No, they have't the power.)

It is axiomatic throughout human society, civilized and primitive, that one does not kill mating, pregnant, nursing or suckling animals. It is against natural law. There is no justification for treating wild animals as nonsentient, expendable objects, like boots or string.

Lower quotas

Is immediate stoppage possible? No; The Canadian government will not consider it. The RSPCA offers two proposals. First, a moratorium, for the matter to be investigated by independent experts. For this the RSPCA would help to pay. Alternatively, phase the slaughter out gradually. Lower the annual quota by 15 per cent per annum and during those seven years create alternative employment in Newfoundland.

The slaughter is symptomatic of a greater crisis facing today's world. The human race is more numerous and powerful than ever before. We can diminish or destroy any species we like. During the past 300 years, about 300 species have disappeared by slaughter or destruction of habitat. The harp seal, though diminished to 1.3 million from an estimated 10 million 30 years ago, is not yet in danger. But that is not the point.

Have we a responsibility towards other species; or are they the creatures to whom we can do anything we like simply because we have power? Does mere economic gain justify any cruelty? And do our marginal economic interests automatically take precedence over wild creatures' lives? When material gain outweighs moral principle, that is decadence. Only someone who wanted his susceptibilities lulled could credit the Canadian arguments.

One no longer sees leopard-skin coats, or stuffed hummingbirds in ladies' hats; steel traps or otter-hunting. We've come a long way. The harp seal slaughter could be stopped if everyone felt strongly enough.

There is one effective step Britain can and ought to take, now. The U.S., France and Itay have banned the import of harp seal products. Why don't we? In the past we led the world in humanity to animals. If every country banned imports, the trade would collapse. It's useless talking to the Canadian government. But not to our own, who are only waiting for sufficient public pressure to ban imports.

At least let us all ensure that Great Britain has no further part in this stupid, dismal cruelty.

TORONTO STAR

LOUGHEED
. . . separatism

Peter Lougheed has been returned as premier of Alberta, thus surprising no one. Voters gave him 74 out of 79 seats, maintaining his absolute grip on the legislature.

Should we therefore congratulate an able political leader and a dedicated champion of his provincial constituency on his unparalleled success? Not exactly.

Granted that the name of the game in politics is to win, Peter Lougheed won with a campaign strategy which played dangerously with the future of this country. Some of his statements — evoking an eastern Canadian horde ready to despoil Alberta of its oil in the ground as well as the fortune it has made from selling it — made separatist Quebec premier Rene levesque look like a piker in declarations of selfish regional interests.

No reasonable Canadian begrudges the people of Alberta the good fortune to be sitting on top of virtually the entire supply of Canada's available oil in a time of rising energy costs. Indeed, Canadians are moving to Alberta to share this bonanza at the rate of one every five minutes.

There is also an increasing awareness — among eastern Canadians as well as in the West — that the economics of this country need to be reconstructed in such areas as tariff policies and transportation costs which have favored central Canada in the past.

The winds of change are blowing from one end of the country to the other. But what does it serve either the country or any province for one Canadian leader to stand on the grievances of the past with statements like this, variously repeated by Lougheed during his campaign:

"I recall the automobiles we have been buying for a long time from (Ontario) — I think we have a long way to go before the equity is even." In other words, a long time before Alberta's net oil profits make up for the historically higher western price of Ontario-built cars because of tariffs and transportation costs.

If Canada is really about to degenerate into a system of competing principalities, each trying to use the advantages of the present to redeem ancient wrongs, then we are truly lost.

Would it really have cost Lougheed many votes to tout the good luck and good management of his government while at the same time acknowledging that Alberta owes some part of its good fortune as a contribution to the building of a greater Canada?

He has won a famous election victory on the basis of a provincialism as needless as it was blatant. That makes him a true Alberta patriot for all to see. What is also apparent is his readiness to kick aside all ideas of Canadian national unity and purpose in order to preserve his own fiefdom. The result is a sad election triumph.

The 'thin edge' that needs protection

By JOHN B. OAKES
New York Times

Anyone who mistakenly assumes that the environmental movement is everywhere in retreat — buffeted as it has been by the misleading economic arguments almost daily levelled against it — would gain a different perspective by observing in action one of the aggressive, knowledgable, young environmentalists who have recently launched a brand new environmental crusade to halt the alarmingly rapid deterioration of one of America's most important natural resources — its coastal zone.

This is the Thin Edge, as Anne W. Simon calls it in her fine new book of that title, the linear frontier of varying widths — of fabulous beauty and biological producitivty — where land and water meet at the borders of the sea. So much of this critical area — whether along the Atlantic and Gulf Coasts, the Great Lakes or the Pacific — has already been "developed," polluted or otherwise degraded, and so great is the imminent threat of more to come that the young represenatives of major conservation organizations have formed their new group to focus public attention on this clear and present danger to the American coastline. The grouping is called the Coast Alliance.

With the formal or informal support of such nationally-known conservation organizations as the Sierra Club and Friends of the Earth, the Natural Resources Defence Council and the Conservation Foundation, the goal of the Coast Alliance is to educate Americans to the immense importance of the fragile coastal ecology and the vital need for its preservation, as well as to stimulate protective legislation to fill the gaps and tighten the loose controls of present law. This effort is geared to next year, which, it is hoped, will become known as "The Year of the Coast."

Why is this new effort necessary? The coastal zone, which is as varied as it is extensive, is of prime importance not merely for its esthetic and recreational value (alone reason enough for its better protection) but also for the tremendous economic significance of its natural resources. Parts of it — especially the estuaries and tidal marshes — are among the most productive areas on earth, forming the breeding and feeding grounds for countless specie of fish, crustaceans, birds and mammals, as well as forming a kind of natural pollution-control mechanism, cleansing inland waters on their way to the sea. These same estuarine areas, together with sandy beaches and shifting dunes, also form a protective barrier and buffer for the mainland against flooding and erosive action of wind and wave.

It is estimated that two-thirds of the specie that together make up more than 90 per cent of the total sea food catch in the United States depend on such estuaries as Chesapeake Bay wholly or in part for their survival.

A productive but delicate zone

On the other side of the continent, where the coastal zone is generally of quite different nature from that of the Atlantic and Gulf and Great Lakes shores, the waters of Puget Sound, for example, are among the most productive in the world.

Yet on Atlantic and Pacific, on the Lakes or on the Gulf, it is this same coastal zone that is under the most severe developmental pressures, which, while completely legitimate from the point of view of the economy, can be completely disastrous from the point of view of the ecology. These pressures come not only from industry, which often finds coastal areas the most economically efficient in which to locate, or from oil prospectors exploring the mineral resources of the Continental Shelf, or from dredging and filling to promote commerce, navigation or trade, but also from real estate developers trying to satisfy the recreational or "second home" demands generated by the country's explosive growth in population and in affluence. The familiar conflict between industrialization and urbanization on the one hand, and ecological understading and developmental restraint on the other, is nowhere else so well defined as in the coastal zones of the United States, and nowhere else are sensible, effective controls more urgently needed to keep in balance the requirements of the economy and the imperatives of the ecology.

A bewildering variety of federal and state laws of different degrees of effectiveness and with different — sometimes contradictory and conflicting — aims already exists. While these laws have been of some use and are certainly better than nothing, the natural Resources Defence Council points out in a recently-published, brilliant summary of the whole coastal problem, that the present state of federal legislation suffers from confusion, incoherence, inherent weakness and administrative chaos. One major goal of the Coast Alliance is to achieve a basic, clearly-defined and consistent national coastal policy and to establish along with it a national coastal preservation system — an issue destined to rank in importance along with land-use, wilderness protection and air and water pollution as one of the highest priority environmental questions of the coming decade.

Red Currant lures hummers

For the first time in a long time the season seems to have gotten ahead of me.

As you've probably noticed, if you pass this way regularly, I have a great habit of rushing the season. When it's winter, I'm rushing spring; when it's summer, I'm rushing fall, and so on. Around every corner, under every stone, behind every change in the weather, I see the signs of a new season.

Not so this spring. Yes, I started off with a bang seeing spring in such things as the changing plumage of Golden-crowned Sparrows in February and the first snowdrop in January, but somewhere about the first week in March spring took over and for the next three weeks, with a burst of fine summery weather, left me standing in its dust.

The result was that last week, while working quietly in the garden one morning, a tiny male Rufous Hummingbird had to remind me that spring had taken her great leap forward and that, for once, I was behind the time. He did all this simply by buzzing me as I cleaned the accumulation of winter trash away from the base of one of my red-flowering currants. His attack made me realize that the flowers of that red currant would soon be one of his favorite stops as he went his rounds of nectar-bearing flowers.

I've got four red-flowering currant bushes in my yard. For most of the year they're rather straggly shrubs that really do little to enhance the beauty of the years. In late summer they carry a few bluish berries that quickly draw the attention of the robins, but for most of the rest of the year they're lost among more flamboyant greenery.

I say "most of the rest of the year" advisedly, because in early spring my red-flowering currants put on a show that pays their way for the rest of the year.

As their name implies, red-flowering currants have red flowers, and it is these red flowers that make this little native currant worth having in the garden. Not only do they supply a splash of color when there is little other color, but they are a favorite of the hummingbirds.

At a time when there is little else, except Indian Plum, blooming for the hummingbirds, the red-flowering currant presents a riot of color that, given the right kind of spring, can last a month.

More than that, through all this those flowers produce a supply of nectar that makes them the focus of countless ownership disputes among the hummingbirds.

Any yard, at this time of year, and for as long as the red flowers last, can have an almost continuous parade of hummingbird visitors. And the nicest thing about all this is that it takes little or no work to have.

Red-flowering currants are the easiest plants to propagate. My four are all from cuttings taken from wild plants that are relatively easy to find around Victoria. I just stuck the cuttings into a bed of good soil, fed and watered them well and within a year, of the half dozen I started with, four were ready to transplant. Since then, they've never looked back.

Most years I watch those currants carefully. They tell me when to expect Rufous Hummingbirds. Most years I'm waiting impatiently for the little fellows to arrive, but not this year.

The last time I looked at those currants, in early March, they showed no sign of life. The next time I noticed them was the morning the hummingbird dropped by. In the intervening two weeks fine weather had brought them to their best.

And if it hadn't been for a pugnacious little hummingbird, I might have missed the transformation.

Charles Arrives In Victoria Sunday

Prince Charles arrives in Victoria Sunday for a 2½-day stopover on his round-the-world trip.

It will be the future monarch's first visit to the capital city.

Most of his time will be spent at Lester Pearson College of the Pacific at Pedder Bay where he will talk to students and present a flag of the International Council of United World Colleges, of which he is president.

The prince is scheduled to arrive at Pat Bay airport at 12:30 p.m. aboard the Queen's VC-10. The flight, which originated in Singapore, concludes a six-week royal tour of Australasia.

He will be greeted at the B.C. Government's Air Services hangar on the east side of the airport with an honor guard from Royal Roads Military College and a 21-gun salute fired by the 5th B.C. Field Regiment.

A host of dignities including Lt.-Gov. Henry Bell-Irving, Premier Bill Bennett and Senator Ray Perrault, will be on hand to welcome him.

The prince will leave the airport at 12:50 p.m.

Details of the route had not been made public by noon today. However the police-escorted motorcade is expected to follow Pat Bay Highway to Blanshard, Fort and Rockland, arriving at Government House at 1:20 p.m.

A small reception of about 150 persons will be held at 5 p.m. It will followed by a private dinner attended only by the prince, his entourage, Bell-Irving and his staff.

On Monday the prince leaves Government House at 9:20 a.m. for Pearson College, arriving at 10 a.m. After lunch he will be taken out in a Coast Guard rescue boat to Race Rocks — possibly for some salmon fishing — and will view divers on the return to Pedder Bay.

At 4 p.m. he will have a rap session with students in Max Bell Hall.

Following dinner at 7 p.m. the prince will attend a student concert beginning at 8:30 p.m.

He will spend the night in a suite in the college's administration building and departs at 8:20 a.m. Tuesday for the airport. His plane is scheduled to leave at 9:20 a.m. for Yellowknife where he will open the new Prince of Wales Northern Heritage Centre.

$40.6M In Grants

The provincial and federal governments signed an agreement Friday under which Ottawa will provide $40.6 million to municipalities during the next two years for community services.

Municipal Affairs Minister Bill Vander Zalm said the agreement simplifies operating procedures between the governments.

He's Born to be King But Others Rule Him

Douglas Keay, Britain's leading writer on the Royal Family, wrote this specially for Canadians who will be seeing Prince Charles, the world's most eligible bachelor, on his current visit.

By DOUGLAS KEAY
Special to the Times

A lot of people think it must be a great life being a Prince — the girls, the money, the pomp and ceremony.

Certainly millions of women dream of being in a position to marry Prince Charles (whom Victorians will be seeing Sunday and Monday).

Thirty years old last November, he is undoubtedly the most eligible bachelor in the world.

But maybe some people would have second thoughts if they knew what the job entails. If they knew, for instance, that Prince Charles can rarely, if ever, drive his own car with a girl friend beside him, without having his private detective occupy another seat.

He can never say in public what he thinks about nuclear weapons, the European Common Market, the Rhodesian crisis. The royal family are not expected to comment on political issues, and they are not allowed to vote in elections.

If Prince Charles falls in love with the most wonderful girl in the world and wishes to marry her he can't — if she happens to be a Roman Catholic. Or, if he does insist on marrying her, he can't become King unless Parliament votes in favor of changing the law.

In accordance with an Act of Parliament passed in 1559, once Charles becomes King he assumes the title of Supreme Governor of the Church of England and is forbidden to marry into the Roman church. Another law — the Act of Succession, 1701 — stipulates that the Crown must descend to "heirs of the body", and specifically says they must be Protestant.

Incidentally, apart from any other considerations, these laws make it seem highly unlikely that Charles would ever have married Princess Caroline of Monaco, or will sometime in the future wed Princess Marie-Astrid of Luxembourg — another favorite with the gossip columnists, but also a Catholic.

World's most eligible bachelor

Over the years a string of likely names has been linked with the Prince. Some have been Ladies — the daughters of dukes or earls. Some have been Princesses from somewhat obscure European royal families. One was an American: Mary Jo Watkins, daughter of an Admiral, is still a good friend of the prince.

As Prince Charles once told me: "I've fallen in love with lots of girls."

But here again he has a problem. A young lady has only to be seen in his company once — arriving at a theatre or a party — and the romance spotters are out, asking the question in screaming headlines the next morning: "Is this the girl Charles wants to wed?"

Although he appreciates the public's natural interest in his matrimonial prospects, the Prince of Wales becomes very angry when the press hounds any of his girl friends. So sometimes he lays a false trail — either arriving and leaving a party in the company of several young men and women, or arranging for the girl he's really interested in to be already at the party when he arrives.

Now he has reached the ripe old age of 30, interest in Charles' girl friends is bound to increase even more — in part at least because of what he told me in an interview three years ago. Talking generally about his future he said he thought "a good age for a man to get married is around 30."

As he so rarely gives personal interviews the press around the world has never allowed him to forget that quote.

Being the Prince of Wales — and, more especially, being the unmarried heir to the throne of England — is like being born with a silver camera in your face.

Being heir to the throne is like being born with a silver camera in your face

Charles can never entirely escape public attention. He can never go anywhere incognito. Reputedly he tried it a few years back, slipping out of Buckingham Palace in a false beard and dark glasses. The experiment was a total failure. Nobody recognized him, but everybody kept looking at him!

Unlike a politician or a film star, who strives for fame, Charles has been a world celebrity since birth. He was never able to make a choice about whether he wanted his role or not — at least not without abdicating all rights as did his great uncle, the Duke of Windsor.

His parents did their best to protect him from public scrutiny as a child. But even this kindness meant he was deprived of some childhood joys. He didn't for instance, take his first ride on the subway until he was seven. And in the archives there is a newspaper picture of a solemn, frightened little boy braving a corridor of popping flash-bulbs, arriving for his first day at school.

In some ways the surprise is that Charles has turned out to be the balanced, breezy, caring sort of person that he is.

He studied anthropology and history at Cambridge University knowing full well he could never follow a career in either subject. He served five years in the Royal Navy, rose to the rank of lieutenant-commander and captained his own very small ship — but had to face the fact that he would never progress further. (Actually he wasn't too displeased; he gets sea-sick).

And now he is fully embarked on a lifetime of launching ships, opening colleges, presiding over endless charities, attending banquet after banquet, jetting round the world and shaking the hands of a million strangers.

A typical kind of day for the Prince goes something like this: 7:30-8 a.m. rise and shine. Possibly go for a horseback ride with Princess Anne and husband Mark. Change clothes and helicopter-ride 200 miles to tour three factories and two schools before making speech at official luncheon. Return to London, change into army uniform and sit for official portrait. Change clothes to attend charity-cocktail party. Change into dinner jacket to be guest of honor at industrialists' banquet. Make second speech of day. Return to palace around midnight.

Not all of his days are as busy as that, of course and he does manage to cram in his polo, his fishing, his hunting in between.

Actually Prince Charles enjoys most of the fantastically busy royal round, and what he doesn't he sees as a duty. But if you're thinking that in any case he's paid a fortune for all the work he does, you'd be wrong. Unlike the Queen, Princess Mararet, and nearly all the other members of Britain's royal family, Prince Charles doesn't receive a penny from government funds.

The Queen, who's immune from paying income tax, has a parliament-granted allowance running, at present, at over three-and-half million dollars. Out of this she has to pay for the running of the royal household. Prince Philip receives about $175,000 from the nation's coffers, and Princess Margaret around $120,000.

But Charles' only income is from the profits of the Duchy of Cornwall — inherited property and land in London and in the west of England. In recent years, for a variety of reasons, this annual income — arond $200,000 — has actually been going down while inflation has been pushing everything else up!

What's more, because of an arrangement made by one of his ancestors, Charles voluntarily gives away half of it to the government each year — though, happily for him, he doesn't pay tax on the rest.

Unlike the Queen, who owns Balmoral Castle and Sandringham House but not Buckingham Palace — it belongs to the nation — Prince Charles has no house that he can call absolutely his own.

Chevening, a Georgian mansion in Kent, was put at his disposal in the will of an admirer a few years ago, but he very rarely goes there. For one thing, it is on the wrong side of London for polo and fox-hunting!

Charles has no private plane, pays for the upkeep of his apartments at Buckingham Palace, and his car, an Aston Martin DB6, is over 10 years old.

All in all, the life of a Prince is perhaps not as glittering as it may seem to be. (c Syndication International)

LIVE IN AN URBAN AREA?

Sometime next week, (Monday to Saturday), two people will call at your home and identify themselves as official federal ENUMERATORS. It is their job to compile the new list of eligible voters in your Polling Division. They will ask the names of all persons living in your home, who are Canadian citizens, age 18 years and over and will give you an Enumeration Record—(Form 301)—for each one. Form 301 should be kept until Election Day.

LIVE IN A RURAL AREA?

One Enumerator, probably someone from your neighbourhood, prepares the new list of voters. That person doesn't have to call at your home personally, since the information needed can be obtained from other reliable sources.

CHECK THE VOTERS' LIST!

You'll have 2 chances to do this—

(1) Within the next 10 days the new list of voters will be posted in both Urban and Rural Polling Divisions. Check that your name is on the list and spelled correctly.

(2) Four weeks from now, if you live in an Urban area, you will receive a printed copy of the voters' list for your Polling Division, in the mail. Check again that your name is on the list—correctly!

NOT ON THE LIST?

REMEMBER—if your name is not on the list, you will not be able to vote if you live in an URBAN Polling Division.

In a RURAL Polling Division, you can be "vouched" for by a friend or neighbour on Election Day if that person is on the Voters' List for your area.

Seattle Took In $60M During Tut: Survey

SEATTLE (AP) — The treasures of King Tutankhamen are long gone, but the boy king left behind about $60 million in benefits for the Seattle area, a study shows.

The riches from Tut's tomb were exhibited here last year from July to November, as part of a six-city nationwide tour. The estimated fringe benefits were calculated in a study commissioned by the exhibit's sponsor, the Seattle Art Museum.

A survey of people standing in line for the exhibit during August indicated that more than two-thirds of the 1.3 million Tut viewers here were overnight visitors and that they spent $21.28 for each of their 2.7 days in Seattle. The remaining day visitors spent an average $6.72 each.

The fabulous new Memory Bank Calendar Watch!

It's a Seiko quartz miracle!
A continuous display of hours, minutes, seconds, month, day and date (above left) is only part of it.
At the push of a button, the Memory Bank Calendar displays the full calendar (above right) for any month from Jan., 1930 through Dec., 2009.
And that's not all! It will also remind you of future dates you don't want to forget. Simply pre-program important dates coming up in the next year. When the appropriate month is displayed, your dates will flash and "memo" marks will automatically appear to remind you.
Battery life approximately 2 years.

70 Nuclear Plants On the Go in U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are currently 70 operating nuclear reactors in the United States providing 12 per cent of the nation's total electrical power.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) says another 92 plants have construction permits and 28 proposed plants have their designs under NRC review. Six other plants are on the drawing boards.

The NRC says power generated by the 70 operating plants offsets about 1.8 million barrels of oil consumption daily.

Forty-three states have nuclear facilities of one form or another within their boundaries.

company processing atomic fuel is accused of negligence and widespread health and safety violations.

The pall east by these events contrasts sharply with the industry's outlook as this year began. With increasing pressure for a solution to the energy problem and a growing public perception of government regulation as excessive and costly, the atomic power industry had hoped to cut back the regulations that now make the licensing of a nuclear plant an 14-year process.

But Thursday, as Three Mile Island's plant's owners were saying that the reactor's safety systems in fact had prevented a more serious accident, critics were citing the incident as evidence that nuclear power is too risky.

"This incident makes a lie of the soothing propaganda of the nuclear zealots that serious nuclear accidents are nearly impossible," said California Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr., who has been criticized widely for stopping the Sundesert Nuclear plant in his state. "I see this as a major issue in the decade ahead . . . ."

One result of the accident, according to White House sources, is that President Carter may not include the plea for nuclear power that Energy Secretary James Schlesinger has been urging him to make in his coming energy message.

"If I were sitting in the president's chair, I would pause a long while before issuing any statement encouraging a rapid expansion of nuclear power — it just has to be postponed until the political clamor recedes," one high administration official said.

Reflecting on the Pennsylvania accident, Rep. Morris K. Udall (Dem.-Ariz.) said Thursday he feels it is difficult to predict what the impact on the industry will be. Because the accident, though serious, was contained by the safety systems, it is possible that in two or three years there will be "a surge of confidence" in nuclear power, he said. On the other hand, he said, there could be the opposite reaction and "the de facto moratorium we have on new plants will continue."

The intensifying debate over nuclear power's future has come at a particularly difficult time for the industry, which is dominated by such firms as General Electric and Westinghouse. Orders for new nuclear plants, which peaked at 41 in 1973, fell to two last year.

There are a variety of reasons for the decline, including a reduction in the utilities' own estimates for future generating capacity.

But growing public opposition to nuclear power, which has led to long delays in getting plants approved and the threat of moratoriums on new plants in five states, has put the nuclear industry on the defensive.

Despite the setbacks, however, the nuclear power industry and its backers make a vigorous argument for atomic plants as a means of reducing the nation's dependence on foreign oil.

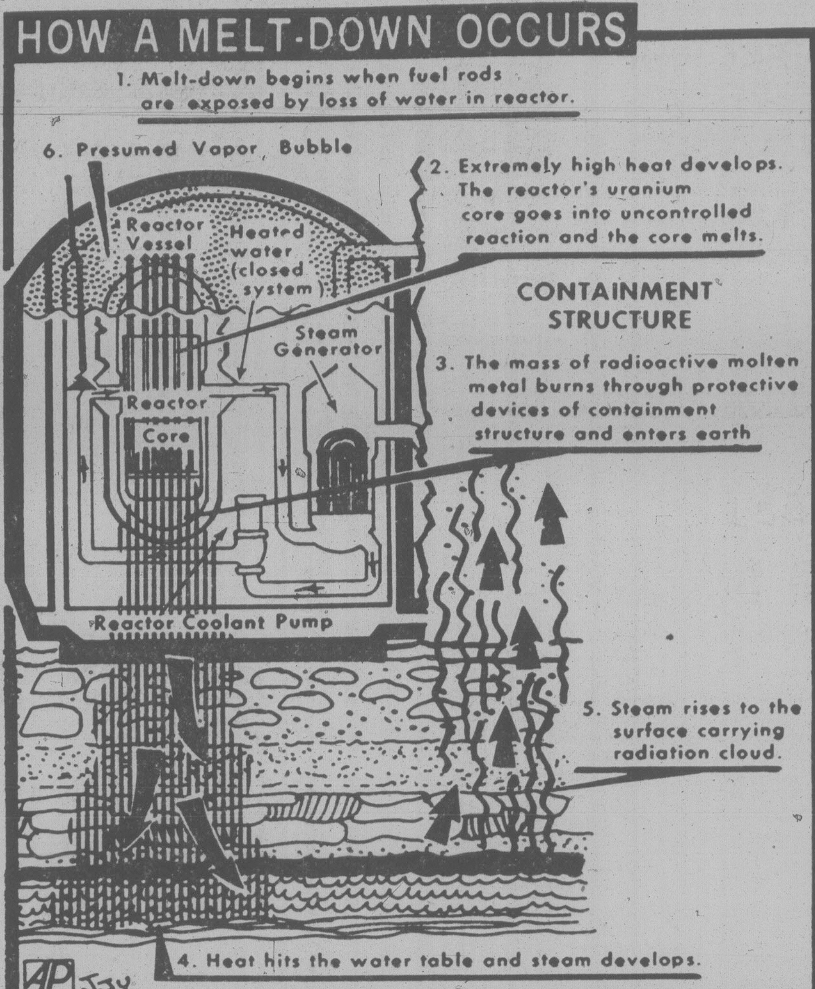
Mike Segal of the Edison Electric Institute pointed out that nuclear power provided 13 per cent of U.S. electrical needs last year, displacing millions of barrels of imported oil.

"The accident doesn't change in any manner our position that nuclear power is needed," Segal says.

This view is shared by Sen. Henry Jackson (Dem-Wash.) who said Thursday "The immediate effect of the incident hurts." Chairman of the Senate Energy Committee, Jackson said that the loss of the Three Mile Island plant could increase oil imports by 45,000 barrels a day.

Dr. Norman Rassmussen of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, author of the Rassmussen report, said that based on information he had, the Harrisburg accident "was not serious from the standpoint of public consequences." Rassmussen said that he expects the public impact on a short-term basis to be significant.

HOW A MELT-DOWN OCCURS



1. Melt-down begins when fuel rods are exposed by loss of water in reactor.
6. Presumed Vapor Bubble
2. Extremely high heat develops. The reactor's uranium core goes into uncontrolled reaction and the core melts.

3. The mass of radioactive molten metal burns through protective devices of containment structure and enters earth

5. Steam rises to the surface carrying radiation cloud.
4. Heat hits the water table and steam develops.

Demand Swells for Probe Into Canadian N-Safety

OWEN SOUND, Ont. (CP) — The recent accident at the Three Mile Island nuclear plant in Harrisburg, Pa., may prompt a Canadian inquiry into nuclear safety, says a critic of the nuclear industry.

Dr. Gordon Edwards, chairman of the Canadian Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, said his organization has been pushing for a temporary halt to the nuclear expansion program and asking for a national inquiry since 1975.

In a telephone interview Friday from his home in Saint Laurent, Que., Edwards said Canadians cannot make a responsible decision about nuclear power unless they have all the facts.

He said people should be aware of the long-term effects of radiation exposure which include increased incidence of cancer and genetic defects.

Edwards praised Ontario Hydro, which operates several nuclear power plants in the province, for its engineering capabilities. However, he said he did not have much regard for its analytical abilities.

The emergency cooling systems in Candu reactors are not working as efficiently as planned, he said, adding that this is an example of poor analysis by the system's designers.

"Personally, I think this is the tip of the iceberg."

Paul Carroll, founding president of the Ontario Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, said a moratorium should be placed on nuclear energy.

Carroll said he has been accused of causing unneccessary distress by talking about the potential risks of nuclear power. However, these risks are genuine concerns, he said.

Effects of Radiation

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Exposure to radiation can make changes in the molecules inside living cells and the damage done, if any, is roughly proportional to the dose.

At low levels, radiation can scramble some genetic information in a cell's nucleus. But the cell has repair mechanisms which are capable of repairing the damage.

A millirem is one-thousandth of a rem, the standard measure of absorbed radiation for humans.

At higher levels, radiation begins to produce effects which cannot be seen immediately but which show up later.

The best known of these effects is cancer, thought to be a slowly developing result of changes in the genetic material. But such effects are only apparent by studying large numbers of persons.

Of the 113,000 survivors of atom bombs dropped on Japan in 1945, many of whom were exposed to thousands of millirems, about 64 persons died of leukemia in excess of the number who normally would have been expected to succumb to the disease.

Recent projections say that about five times as many survivors as that will die eventually from other cancers.

At very high doses, radiation effects become more readily apparent.

A dose of several hundred rems causes nausea and vomiting. The nausea goes away in a few days. But the radiation has killed cells in the bone marrow that replace the red blood cells that carry oxygen in the body.

In a month or so, the person develops anemia — a red blood cell deficiency — as the old cells die off and no new ones replace them.

A fatal dose of radiation at this level is usually considered to be about 500 rems.

At much higher doses, several thousand rems for example, death can be immediate from direct damage to the nervous system.

Cruise in the Sun Finishes in Flames

CHARLOTTE AMALIE, Virgin Islands (AP) — Firefighters hosed down the smouldering hulk of the Italian cruise ship Angelina Lauro today as most of its 800 passengers boarded three others ships and headed toward Puerto Rico and flights home after their holiday in the sun ended in flames.

One Canadian passenger was injured.

"We are accounting for 98 per cent of the passengers and 100 per cent of the crew, but we are not saying the other two per cent are missing," said Claudio Ilariucci, director of Caribbean operations for the Costa Line, which chartered the Angelina Lauro.

The official said only one of the passengers was injured, an unidentified Canadian who was being treated at a St. Thomas hospital for shock after leaping into the sea from a cabin on the burning ship. The only other person seriously injured was a fireman taken to hospital for smoke inhalation, he said.

He said 90 per cent of the passengers were Americans and the rest Canadians and other nationalities, but the passenger list was not available.

Len Mason, vice-president of the Toronto-based Suntours Ltd., said there were at least 75 Canadians aboard the liner, most from the Toronto area.

"But we've been assured by officials of the Costa Line that all the Canadians are safely ashore," he said in an interview.

Mason said the passengers booked with his travel service were to be taken to San Juan overnight aboard the Angelina's sister ship, the Carla C, also operated by Costa.

He said they will return to Canada late this afternoon.

Ilariucci, speaking to reporters in San Juan, said most of the passengers would arrive in San Juan today on three other cruise ships that were docked at the island of St. Thomas where the Angelina Lauro went up in flames Friday afternoon. He said some chose to remain on the U.S. island and he could not account for them.

He said the cruise line will give the passengers food, clothing, pocket money and insurance claim forms for their lost baggage. Chartered jets were to fly them home today, he said. The week-long cruise had been scheduled to end today, with passengers departing by plane from San Juan.

Ilariucci said the ship was still burning early today and he called it a total loss. Lloyd's, the maritime insurance firm, said the vessel was insured for $12 million.

Bonsaver Gezza of Genoa, the chief deck steward, said about 25 passengers and about 55 of 285 crew members were aboard when the fire broke out.

Firefighters from the island and from two U.S. Navy destroyers tied up here for the weekend poured tons of water into the flaming vessel which settled into the mud at dockside. Officials said the firemen were trying to flood the ship's engine rooms to keep flames from reaching the 1,400 tons of diesel fuel in the ship's tanks.

Fiendish New Bomb Used to Blow Up IRA Opponent

LONDON (AP) — Irish terrorists used a fiendish new time bomb to blow up Airey Neave, a leading Conservative MP fiercely opposed to the Irish Republican Army, Scotland Yard experts were quoting as saying today.

The assassination, just eight days after IRA gunmen killed Britain's ambassador to the Netherlands, cast a pall over the political scene as campaigning began for Britain's general election May 3.

Neave's blue sedan was torn apart by the two-pound bomb Friday as he drove it up the exit ramp from Parliament's underground garage near the clock tower that houses Big Ben.

British crime reporters quoted Scotland Yard experts as saying the bomb probably was taped under the car earlier in the day when it stood outside Neave's apartment in Masham Street, one-half kilometre from the Parliament buildings.

They said the bomb worked in two stages. A traditional clock-timer first ticked to zero, triggering stage two, in which a trembler device was armed and awaited movement by a jolt when the car was in motion.

The experts theorized Neave, 63, drove to Parliament with the bomb ticking under the chassis. The trembler device was armed while he was in his office, leaving him to complete the final act of his own assassination when he drove his car away.

Ambulancemen Barry Davies and Brian Craggs, who got to him first, said the bomb severed Neave's legs and shattered the lower part of his body. He was unconscious until he died one-half hour later.

"This is the first attack in a new campaign against the British political and military establishment and will continue until there is a complete withdrawal of the British political and military presence from Northern Ireland," the Irish National Liberation Army said in a telephone call to a Dublin newspaper.

Press Under Guard

will contain details of an increased homeowners grant and other goodies as the government disburses $300 million in surpluses it has built up over the past three years.

It will detail government spending of some $4.5 billion — a 50 per cent increase since the Socreds took over from the NDP in 1975.

Bennett assured the legislature Thursday that the budget will be generous to both the school system and hospital boards.

NDP finance critic Dave Stupich (Nanaimo) is convinced the budget will contain an eye-catching gimmick.

He suggests the government may assume debt servicing charges for hospitals, unburdening them from that heavy load.

He noted Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed gave municipalities $1 billion to wipe out their debts.

Other sources predict a much more spectacular announcement consistent with the unusual security measures.

A bid to obtain a controlling interest in B.C. Tel has been bandied about.

Word has it that the latest Socred poll which contained questions about likes and dislikes in the province, found a widespread dissatisfaction with B.C. Tel.

Another possibility might be a move by the government, through the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. to get a controlling interest in Westcoast Transmission, the province's gas and oil moving company.

That could in turn pave the way for a natural gas pipeline to Vancouver Island, a project under consideration for years.

That move would sweeten even more the free share giveaway in BCRIC since the crown corporation already owns 10 per cent of Westcoast's stock.

Others insist the budget contains tax relief, maybe even a reduction in the sales tax from its current five per cent level.

Some go as far to predict the sales tax will be wiped out altogether but it seems unlikely that even a Socred government which brags about its business competence could work out a way to live without the $600 milliom annually the tax brings in.

But it was tax changes in 1971 that led to W. A. C. Bennett withholding the advance budget from the press.

Vote-catchers already announced this year include $36 million more for welfare, $32 million for denticare, low interest loans for senior citizens housing, increased help for the handicapped and incentives for small business.

Wrapping up debate on the throne speech Friday, a cocky Bennett delivered a freewheeling tirade against the NDP and the lone Tory MLA Vic Stephens that sounded as if it was being delivered from a campaign platform.

It was a marked change from the Bennett who was visibly stunned when he learned that Trudeau had grabbed his May election slot.

During the next couple of days, Bennett and his executive director Tony Tozer were on the phone for hours to his election strategist and man behind the throne, Dave Brown in Victoria.

Thursday was Bennett's first day back. He bounced into the house amid thundering desk thumping from government benches appearing confident and full of good humor.

And again Friday, he was in top form.

Insiders said the decision had been made: Full speed ahead and damn the Trudeau government.

We'll all know for sure soon.

Hustler Eddie Cooking Books for Church

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

When Eddie Antonelli's father came from Italy to Prince Rupert 70 years ago he earned his living with a pick and shovel, helping dig basements for the fishing community's Roman Catholic church and bishop's house.

Today, Antonelli, 64, is helping build a new church there, not with a pick and shovel but with proceeds from a cook book called 'Ey — Eata You Fish, an expression his father used on his six children many a time at the meal table.

Antonelli — "Just call me the Codfather" — is still Canadian although he has lived in the U.S. for quite a while.

A successful wholesale fish dealer in Seattle, he is known all across the U.S. for his colorful comedy routines on television shows and telethons in which he promotes the fish industry and at the same time raises money for various charities.

As the second oldest child of a poor immigrant family, Antonelli began earning money when he was nine years old.

At that time, Prince Rupert had a legalised red light district.

The town's dog-catcher had a big flower garden and hired young Antonelli to take 12 bunches of flowers to the girls once a week to sell at 25 cents a bunch.

Antonelli got 25 cents for his trouble.

The system worked until Antonelli decided to up the sale price to 35 cents a bunch, keeping the extra $1.10 for himself.

On the next sales trip, he decked himself in a Jackie Coogan-type cap and made sure his shoes weren't too clean.

He added a soft-shoe routine to his sales pitch and was able to command 50 cents a bunch.

He then started to sell newspapers, (Antonelli says all the regular routes were given to "Protestant kids") by working out a strategy that got him out selling papers on the street before the competition.

He says the nuns who taught him at the Annunciation school must have wondered about the state of his kidneys when, day in and day out, he had to go to the bathroom precisely 15 minutes before school was out.

Antonelli — "I was practically raised on the docks" — says he can recall when halibut sold for 25 cents a fish and were so plentiful that fishermen would throw the big ones back because they took up too much room.

By the time he was 12, he was using the fishermen to help fill the family coffers.

Putting on a sad, woe-begone face he'd stand around until someone gave him a fish to take home.

What they didn't know was that Prince Rupert restaurants were only too happy to serve fresh fish bought from the sad-faced youngster at an unbeatable price.

A keen sportsman, Antonelli had to leave school in the eighth grade and was no longer eligible to play on the school basketball team. So he started one of his own, calling it The League of Nations. The team won the city championships.

THE CODFATHER

His first job was in the meat market of the dog-catcher's son. For a while he worked on the docks, and and for a while he was a bouncer in an Italian club, working for tips which were far less than the pay his wife received.

In 1946, he and his wife lived in California while he worked as a studio cop in Hollywood, getting to know movie stars like John Wayne, Gene Autrey and Roy Rogers on a first name basis.

But the lure of the sea — and fish — was too great and after a year he left to come north. Unable to afford much equipment, he bought himself a cheap truck.

Getting in touch with his old fishing contacts and then began serving aboard various fishing vessels as a cook.

Antonelli says he would never have left Prince Rupert if he hadn't married his wife Gudrun (Goodie), who was a legal secretary and wanted to work elsewhere.

They moved to Vancouver using his promotional skills he started what was to turn out to be a highly successful wholesale fishery business.

Some of the Codfather's favorite recipes remembered from his childhood are included in his book, which sells for $5.95. More sophisticated ones, gained in later years, are also included.

Antonelli, who calls himself "a product of the streets", says it's only poetic justice that the proceeds will help the community church which first gave his family a start.

SPORTY BIPLANE designed and being built by Bob Jones is neat little number that will weigh a mere 850 ponds when complete. It's compact too with a wingspan of only 24 feet and a length of 16 feet. Cruising speed will be about 80 mph and its range will be about 200 miles — just the thing for a weekend jaunt. Aircraft was displayed at Hillside Mall where it, and others, drew lots of attention.

Campus Project Start Urged

Camosun College board will be asked Monday to approve and start a $5.9 million multi-purpose building on the Lansdowne campus.

The facilities and planning committee is recommending the college go ahead despite problems it faces acquiring the Paul Building and building a new parking lot.

A report to the board recommends a $25 bus pass subsidy each semester to encourage students to ride the bus.

The committee says the board should instruct administration to start the necessary demolition and site servicing.

Problems in obtaining the Paul Building from Greater Victoria school board and building a new parking lot on Lansdowne campus can be worked out while the new 103,428 square foot building is under construction.

If the board approves, Saanich will be asked to issue permits for construction.

A study of parking arrangements at other B.C. colleges and institutes shows Camosun parking facilities is the most overloaded except for East Kootenay College.

Proposals to ease the parking problem include arranging 365 stalls in several different locations and the eliminating of parking space around the Dunlop Building on the corner of Foul Bay and Lansdowne Roads.

When the college manages to acquire the Paul Building the parking areas could be enlarged by an additional 237 stalls in front and behind the building.

Letters sent earlier this month to the four core municipalities and the Capital Regional District requesting improvement in public transortation could have a significant impact on travel habits of students, according to the committee.

The committee suggests the board subsidize bus passes to a maximum of $25 a semester for students attending Lansdowne. The total cost per sememster would be between $20,000 and $25,000, the report said.

Committee members met with B.C. Hydro and found the company isn't prepared to establish any more routes in the near future. Current bus patterns emphasizing downtown rather than interurban travel will probably be in effect for another couple of years.

Woman Fair After Car Crash

A 23-year-old woman is in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital following an early morning traffic mishap in the 800-block Esquimalt Road.

Esquimalt police said Alison Joan Scorgie, of 394 Lampson, received multiple cuts, a broken wrist and possible internal injuries when the car she was driving slammed into a telephone pole on a curve.

Moments later another car hit the the wreckage, but the driver, Michael Leslie Province, 21, of 916 Claremont, and two unidentified passengers were unhurt.

The mishap occurred at about 2:30 a.m.

New Site for Oil Tanks?

The half-moon harbor at Plumper Bay will be the new site of Greater Victoria's oil tank farm if Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell has her way.

Dowell, who has spent the past couple of months looking for an appropriate site, says the bay, on the east side of Esquimalt Harbor in View Royal would be an ideal location.

Not only are there existing deep sea facilities and a railway line passing through the property, but tall trees on the fringes would afford a natural screen from the highway and nearby residences, she says.

There's an another tempting bonus, too. An oil tank farm, depending on its size, would reduce the View Royal homeowners' tax load by as much as one half, she says.

The 32-acre site is owned by Victoria Plywood which has operated a plant in Plumper Bay for years. Dowell says the company has indicated it would make the land available for sale or lease if the tank farm is approved.

She says she has spoken to the View Royal Advisory Planning Committee and while they have not said yes to the proposal, they at least have not said no.

Further talks are planned with residential groups and members of two Indian band councils in the area.

Federal, provincial, regional and municipal officials have spent nearly seven years trying to find a way of moving Greater Victoria's tank farms which are scattered over six locations occupying about 20 acres of waterfront in the Inner Harbor.

Several alternate sites have been suggested ranging from Duke Point in Nanaimo to Bamberton to a site near Helmcken and Trans Canada Highway.

The oil companies have said if they are forced to relocate out of the Greater Victoria area it would result in price increases on its products.

Dowell notes even a one cent increase in heating oil would cost Greater Victoria residents an additional $287,500 a year.

But that isn't the only reason for keeping the tank farm here, Dowell says. There are about 200 jobs at stake.

A decision on the tank farm site has to be made soon as leases expire on two of the existing properties — Chevron's on Harbor Road and Shell's on Songhees — in only two years time and won't be renewed. The lease on Gulf's depot on Songhees expires in 1987.

Two other companies, Texaco and Imperial, have depots on their own land.

All five have indicated they are prepared to move to a common site. The oil companies have estimated it will cost $12 million if three companies go on two sites. The cost would drop dramatically if they went onto one site, and be even lower if all five companies went together.

Police Demand No Veto By City In Pay Dispute

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Victoria policemen want a city council commitment it will be bound by any contract settlement reached with the police board.

Otherwise, Sgt. Bryan Bailey warned Friday, there is a strong possibility of a strike.

He told a news conference mediator Clark Gilmour has been appointed to assist the parties but the union feels there is no way he will be able to resolve the issues.

"It is obvious that the (police) board is not prepared to meet our requests," Bailey said.

He said once the mediator has withdrawn, there are only two alternatives open to the 130-member union — go on strike or opt for binding arbitration.

Victoria police do not want to go on strike although they are prepared to do so if necessary, Bailey said.

The policemen are confident enough in their position to go the arbitration route, provided council is bound by the agreement as well as the police board.

They are convinced that if the agreement goes beyond the present cost guidelines set by the city, council will veto the pact.

Bailey referred to the situation in 1975 when Mayor Peter Pollen was chairman of the police board. The board and the union reached a settlement but then when it was put before council, aldermen vetoed it.

"We can't go that same route again," Bailey said.

He said he is delivering a letter to city hall asking for a meeting to get an assurance from council that it will be bound by any agreement reached with the board.

Bailey said the policemen are putting their case before the public and seeking Chamber of Commerce backing in order to put pressure on council to hear the policemen's case.

Chamber president Mel Cooper was present but said later he was only there as an interested observer and does not want to get involved on either side of the labor dispute.

One major issue in dispute is the policemen's demand for wage parity with their Vancouver counterparts plus three per cent.

Bailey said assuming Vancouver gets 10 per cent this year and adding the 3.5 per cent Victoria is already behind Vancouver, the extra three per cent for added workload and 2.5 per cent for the fringe benefits, the policemen's whole package works out to about 19 per cent over the previous agreement.

The extra cost to the city would be between $800,000 and $1 million.

Bailey produced statistics indicating the Victoria policeman's workload is 51-percent higher than his Vancouver counterpart.

"Victoria is no Sleepy Hollow any more," he said.

In 1978, the Vancouver policeman handled 54.8 cases while in Victoria he handled 82.9.

The Victoria workload level has been rising sharply, being 15 per cent higher in 1976 and 41 per cent in 1977, Bailey said.

Yet a first-class constable in Victoria is paid $1,617 a month or $9.30 an hour, whereas the Vancouver policemen gets $1,674 a month or $9.62 an hour, a difference of 3.5 per cent.

Bailey said the crime rate in Vancouver in 1978 was 127.7 crimes for every thousand people, whereas in Victoria it was 188.3 — 47.5 per cent more crimes in Victoria on a per capita basis.

To field a policeman in Vancouver cost $33,192 in 1978 amd in Victoria it was $29,366, a difference of $3,826. Bailey said this means it would cost each taxpayer in Victoria another $8.13, or two cents a day, to bring Victoria up to par with Vancouver.

The board has offered the policemen 7.5 per cent in the one-year agreement. Bailey said this is totally unsatisfactory because it would put Victoria only 3.8 per cent ahead of Vancouver's 1978 rate and, according to the union's estimate, behind Saanich policemen who received a six-percent increase plus a cost-of-living allowance clause in this year's contract.

"The city of Victoria policemen's union believes this discrimination must end this year," Bailey said.

Petch Re-appointed

Dr. Howard Petch has been reappointed to another five-year term as president of University of Victoria.

He was the unanimous choice of a 17-member search committee of the UVic Board of Governors.

A spokesman for the board said Friday Petch's nomination received the backing of 89.9 per cent of the full-time faculty members.

Petch became president of UVic on Jan. 1, 1975 and his first term ends on June 30, 1980.

Under his leadership the university has undergone extensive expansion programs with the building of new residences, academic buildings, the University Centre, and with the opening of three new professional schools in law, nursing and social work.

Sweeping Layoffs Hit Auxiliary Park Staff

Hundreds of auxiliary parks branch employees have been laid off across Vancouver Island and the mainland.

A spokesman at the regional parks office at Nanaimo said he doesn't know why but said he suspects an overrun in the parks ministry budget.

"All I know we were instructed to lay off members of the auxiliary staff," he said.

One casualty of the cutback is the popular nature interpretation program for Greater Victoria school children at Goldstream Provincial park.

Kerry Joy, in charge of nature interpretation and information, confirmed the layoffs and said it is because of a lack of funds.

Parks director Tom Lee, however, said it is not unusual to lay off people at the end of the budget year. He said he does not know how many people were affected.

"Once the new budget is approved, employees will be taken on again," he said.

The cancellation of the spring nature interpretation program for school children drew criticism from Douglas Turnbull, an executive of the Victoria Natural History Society.

Denticare Not Free: McClelland

The provincial government's proposed dental care program will be an extension of private insurance plans.

It will feature subsidies for the elderly and poor, but patients will have to pay part of their dental bills, says Health Minister Bob McClelland.

McClelland, in a letter to Don MacFarlane, president of the College of Dental Surgeons of B.C., praised the college's proposals for dental insurance.

A dental insurance plan to provide a measure of protection against high dental costs was promised in the government's speech from the throne. No details were given.

"I am in complete agreement that any government plan should not compete with the plans that are already in operation and which cover such a large section of the population," McClelland said in his letter.

"I agree that there is (another) large section of the population who should be able to afford care and who would like to be able to obtain coverage through a plan."

He said B.C. residents would support a plan aimed at low-income families and senior citizens but it would be necessary to control costs.

People over 65 years of age would have their premiums paid by the government, and low-income families qualifying for assistance on medical premiums would get the same help with dental premiums.

However, both groups would have to pay 20 to 50 per cent of their dental bills.

Census Questions Upheld

A challenge on the constitutionality of questions relating to property on census forms was rejected Friday by a Victoria judge.

Judge Blake Allan found a 40-year-old Victoria carpenter guilty in provincial court of refusing to complete a census form on June 1, 1976, and levied a $100 fine.

Walter Moedel, 3366 Glasgow, had pleaded not guilty to the charge laid under the Statistics Act of Canada.

Defence lawyer Felix Reuben argued some of the questions on the census form were an invasion of the powers assigned by the British North America Act to the provinces.

Reuben told the court he had given notice under the Constitutional Questions Act to Attorney-General Garde Gardom but Allan noted that Gardom had seen fit not to intervene in the court proceedings.

The contentious questions related to the ownership of a home, whether the person rents and the type of dwelling.

Allan said the Oxford English dictionary defines statistics as "In early use, that branch of political science dealing with the collection, classification and discussion of facts bearing on the condition of a state or community.

"In recent use, the department of study that has for its object the collection and arrangement of numerical facts or data, whether relating to human affairs or natural phenomena," he said.

Allan said the federal Parliament is entitled to legislate for the taking of the census and the collection of statistical facts.

"Counsel cited a number of reported decisions in an attempt to convince me that the civil rights aspect of the legislation is dominant.

"However, in spite of the able argument of defence counsel, it is my opinion that his argument is an untenable one.

"I see no reason why other facts and figures may not be collected at the time enumeration for the census is taken. In fact, it seems sensible to me that the government should in the exercise of economy and proper administration of such matters collect such facts at the same time as it takes the census."

Crown counsel Harold Turnham told the court the maximum penalty upon conviction under the act was a $500 fine, three months imprisonment or both.

Victoria Girls In Title Battle

EDMONTON — There were pleasures in the advance but other satisfactions were missing from Victoria Home Lumber's step into tonight's showdown game for the Canadian senior women's basketball championship.

The main pleasure was in victory. Bev Bland and Lorna Lundeen each made good on two foul shots in the final minute to provide Victoria with a 73-71 win over Nova Scotia.

That was enough to send Home Lumber into tonight's final against the Saskatchewan champions from Saskatoon, 69-65 winners over New Brunswick in Friday's other semi-final.

Otherwise, a nervous Victoria coach wasn't jumping with glee.

"We were sluggish and made far too many turnovers," said Home Lumber's Jack Lusk. "It was our worst game of the tournament."

It was fortunate, he added, that the British Columbia champions improved on their shooting eyes in the final minutes. Shooting only about 39 per cent from the field for most of the game, Victoria's percentage improved to 45 in the final minutes to subdue a scrappy Nova Scotia squad.

The eastern squad, ahead 38-35 at the half, scored the game's final hoop with only two seconds left.

Victoria's other plus factor was its depth. Eight players contributed points.

Leading the attack was Leslie Godfrey, the redheaded former Canada West University all-star. She scored 20 while pickup Gail Klaver added 14 and hauled down nine rebounds.

Lundeen (11), Bland (10), Angie Dobie (8), Marg Mainwaring (6), Joanne Sargent (2) and Sandy Lewis (2) completed Victoria's total.

Klaver and Dobie, who picked off 10 rebounds, turned in strong performances under the backboards.

Nova Scotia's individual standout was Nancy Knowlton, who scored 29 points.

Saskatchewan used its aggressive style to maintain its edge over New Brunswick, dominating its opponent's own backboards with 18 out of 24 offensive rebounds. The two teams were fairly even in defensive rebounds, 29-26 for Saskatchewan.

Lorraine Wright, with 18, and Allison Lang, with 13, led the Saskatchewan scoring, while Joyce Slipp had 24 for New Brunswick. Saskatchewan led 37-30 at the half.

Nova Scotia and New Brunswick will meet tonight to decide third and fourth place, while Quebec's Montreal Express face Ontario's Ottawa-Nepean Rookies for fifth and sixth, and Alberta's Calgary Makoi Macs will play Manitoba for seventh and eighth.

In a game to decide last place in the nine-team competition, Manitoba's Winnipeg team defeated St. John's 76-46, leaving the Newfoundland team winless in five starts.

HAPPINESS is scoring a goal and Kevine Hector (11) celebrates his tally that lifted Vancouver Whitecaps into 1-1 tie with Dallas Tornado during second half of North American Soccer League game Friday before about 24,000 Vancouver fans. Also happy is Trevor Wymark of Whitecaps, who eventually lost decision in shootout and saw their regular-season winning streak snapped at 13 games. It was season-opener for Whitecaps. (See story on page 19).

A Big-Time Wedding For Better, For Worse

NEW YORK (CP) — Some call it expansion and others a mini-merger, but whatever terminology is used, the National Hockey League and the World Hockey Association are wedded for better or for worse.

The decision to admit four of the six remaining WHA clubs as NHL members next season was completed on Friday when the NHL's board of governors voted 14 to 3 for a 21-team combined league still divided into four divisions.

The pro-expansionists were in full force in and out of the meetings in New York where owner Harold Ballard of Toronto Maple Leafs was the most vocal minority dissenter.

Ballard, who has voted against taking in the WHA ever since the idea was first broached, said the new members were getting a bum deal because the NHL owners were stripping them of talent.

But president John Ziegler of the NHL and others denied that was the case, claiming the new franchises have a better chance of putting together stronger teams than the poor expansion clubs did when they first started.

Ballard said he personally felt the new agreement was in fact an amalgamation of the two leagues and not an expansion. Governors of Boston Bruins and Los Angeles Kings also took views opposite to those of Ziegler and NHL lawyers in voting against expansion.

The emphasis from Ziegler, one of the architects, was that acceptance of Quebec Nordiques, Edmonton Oilers, Winnipeg Jets and New England Whalers into the NHL was strictly expansion legally and formally, the fifth since the original expansion in the 1967-68 season.

"Clearly, this is an expansion," said Peter O'Malley, general counsel of Washington Capitals and alternate governor and member of the expansion committee.

"The WHA is still in existence. If they want to go and issue some franchises, they're free to do it.

"What we have done is accepted in the membership four teams which have previously played in the WHA but we did not collapse the WHA."

On Oct. 11, 1972, the WHA began its first season with 300 players signed, many of them from the NHL lured by huge salaries, and 12 teams split into two divisions.

For seven years, the WHA and the NHL were locked in a costly hockey war, skyrocketing salaries and dilution of talent that weakened the very structure of the NHL.

But the WHA, often switching franchises and folding many of them along the way, went from a high of 15 clubs to just six in its last season.

"Between 1973 and now, the cost to both sides is well over $100 million," said Jennings, one of the governors who almost succeeded in leading secret merger attempts in 1973.

A major question is whether the latest action by the NHL in accepting the four WHA clubs was brought about by a new threat of anti-trust action because the WHA was being forced to go out of business, unable to seek relief from the NHL through expansion.

WHA president Howard Baldwin, backed by the huge Aetna insurance interests, said that while the league had its problems it could have continued another year.

But with six teams, it would have been difficult for any failing business to continue to operate under that small lineup. Thus there was the risk of a merger being forced upon the NHL and with no competition existing, the risk of another anti-trust lawsuit. The first anti-trust suit, instigated by the WHA, was settled out of court in 1974.

The NHL-WHA talks have been going on for the last 3½ years, off and on, and the governors — until their last two meetings — always managed to kill expansion or merger between the two leagues even as late as in early March at a meeting in North Key Largo, Fla.

But after strong pressures from the Canadian government and city and club officials worried about the future of the Canadian WHA franchises if the league folded, the NHL met in Chicago last week to adopt its expansion committee's report but left open for modification some parts of the 30-page document.

The governors approved them on Friday, leaving May 1 as the date when the incoming HWA teams must post $4,625,000 each when the franchises will be issued.

O'Malley said the switch of Washington from the Norris to the Patrick Division was the main change that was not in the original document.

An expansion draft will be held after the amateur draft during the week of June 11, with each NHL team protecting 15 skaters and two goalies.

After the NHL teams reclaim WHA players whose rights they retain, the four new teams may by priority selection retain two skaters and two goalies from the list of reclaimed players. No first-year pros are affected.

But there are a lot of restrictions for the NHLers in the entire setup, leaving the WHA clubs with a much better chance to negotiate for players than generally believed.

O'Malley and general manager Cliff Fletcher of Atlanta Flames said the incoming franchises would be stronger than their own expansion teams when they entered in the early 1970s.

In the divisional lineup, Washington joins New York Islanders, New York Rangers, Philadelphia and Atlanta in the Patrick Division.

Quebec goes into the Adams Division with Boston, Buffalo, Minnesota and Toronto. Edmonton and Winnipeg are the new members of the Smythe Division along with Chicago, Vancouver, St. Louis and Colorado.

New England is placed in the Norris Division with Montreal, Detroit, Los Angeles and Pittsburgh.

Each club plays a balanced schedule of 80 games, with each team playing two home and two away games against all other clubs.

The agreement still has to be acceptted by the NHL Players' Association but its executive director, Alan Eagleson, differs with Ziegler on legal positions. But the NHL president said he expects player approval.

Ziegler said he believes the new arrangement will benefit hockey by making more funds available for developing players and expanding the minor league which went through serious contraction with the advent of the WHA.

There were three main issues in the expansion plan — money, player rights and some legal considerations and they all were inter-related, Ziegler said. "They were all resolved completely."

Baldwin, who will be losing his job as WHA president but will retain his other post as managing general partner of the Whalers, said his own group was unanimous in accepting the expansion agreement.

The two clubs dropping out of the WHA-Birmingham Bulls and Cincinnati Stingers — will receive more than $6 million compensation between them. Owners of the clubs have indicated that they will try to ice minor league teams in their cities next season, possibly in the Central Hockey League.

$32 Million Bill Paid Off With Gleeful Enthusiasm

By The Canadian Press

Never before has a $32-million bill been received with such giddy enthusiasm.

That's the price the four World Hockey Association clubs will collectively pay for the right to flash a National Hockey League crest. And they couldn't be happier.

"I'm looking forward to bringing the Stanley Cup to Winnipeg," said John Ferguson, the Jets' general manager, upon receiving the news that the expansion deal was approved. The Jets and Edmonton Oilers will challenge for their divisional title next winter, he promptly predicted.

"A great thing for Winnipeg and the province of Manitoba," said Jets' president Michael Gobuty.

Marcel Aubut, president of the Nordiques, said the entrance of the WHA club to the NHL "was an historic day for Quebec City. Quebec now finds itself on the map of North America and that of the entire world."

Maurice Filion, vice-president of Nordiques, gleefully declared: "It should be good for hockey, and what's good for hockey had to come."

Owners and team management weren't the only ones pleased with the results of Friday's expansion.

Right winger Mark Napier of Montreal Canadiens and a former star with Birmingham Bulls also applauded the move. "It's going to improve the game," he declared. "It's going to get rid of weak franchises like Birmingham and Cincinnati . . . Now I think you will have sellout crowds every night."

Everybody in the WHA wasn't dancing in the streets.

"I'm sorry we're not part of it," said Birmingham Bulls owner John Bassett, now running a lame-duck franchise.

"Our attendance and the size of the community does not merit the kind of dollar commitment required to go into the NHL," Bassett added.

Bassett and William DeWitt, Jr., executive vic-president of Cincinnati Stigers, indicated they would attempt to establish Central League franchises in their cities.

It was left to Harrold Ballard, owner of the Toronto Mapale Leafs to supply the sour grapes.

"How can we look toward Edmonton or Winnipeg or those teams to draw people into Maple Leaf Gardens if they haven't got players?" he asked.

"Would you like to see Babe Ruth playing with the New York Yankees today? Here's a guy (Gordie Howe) 51 years of age playing hockey (with the Whalers). Would you pay $12, $15 to see that? I think he was the greatest . . . but you can take only so much milk out of a cow, eh?"

Norway Does It Again To Canadian Curlers

BERN, Switzerland (CP) — For the second year in a row Norway has knocked Canada out of the men's world curling championships in semi-final play.

Kristian Soerum did the trick this time, beating the Barry Fry entry from Winnipeg 6-3 today to advance to the final with Peter Attinger of Switzerland, who romped over West Germany and its Toronto-born skip, Keith Wendorf, 9-5, in the other semi-final.

Norway and Canada had qualified for the semi-finals by winning playoffs with West Germany and the United States respectively Friday after the four teams had finished in a four-way tie for second with 6-3 marks. Switzerland won the preliminary round-robin portion of the championships with a 7-2 record.

West Germany qualified for the last semi-final berth earlier today by beating the Scotty Baird entry from Bimidji, Minn., 7-4, in a matchup of earlier playoff losers. The Americans were defending the title.

Fry's rink downed the Americans 8-4 Friday while Soerum's foursome, with his brother, Morten, throwing skip rocks, nipped West Germany 6-5.

The playoff mess was created earlier Friday when Peter Attinger of Switzerland rallied to defeat Canada 6-5 in the ninth and final draw of the round-robin schedule. Giuseppe Dal Molin of Italy made it more confusing when he shaded Norway 7-6 in an extra end.

West Germany joined the fun when Wendorf defeated Georges Magnier of France 7-4, while the U.S. eliminated Scotland's Jim Waddell with a 5-4 decision.

In the game against the U.S., Fry was at his best, especially in the 10th and final end with the Canadians leading 5-4 but the Americans holding the last rock.

Baird put the pressure on his opponent when he drew through a narrow port while facing two Canadian stones with his first shot. The rock stopped at the top of the eight-foot circle and became shot stone.

Fry, however, followed the same route, struck the U.S. rock and rolled behind a guard and hit the button to lie three. Baird attempted to come around a guard but wrecked and the Canadians stole the crucial points.

First Triumph For Scotland

LIVERPOOL, England (AP) — Rubstic, ridden by Maurice Barnes, won the 1979 Grand National Steeplechase at nearby Aintree today, beating Zongalero by two lengths, with Rough and Tumble third.

Barnes, competing for the first time in the world's most famous steeplechase, rode the first-ever Scottish winner of the National.

Barnes, who has ridden only 11 winners this season, sent Rubstic past four horses and into the lead in the stretch. Zongalero and Rough and Tumble both tired after the last fence, and Rubstic pulled away over the last 200 metres as a crowed of 70,000 cheered wildly.

It was a race full of drama and loose horses frustrated jockeys and ended the hopes of favored Alverton, who fell at Beecher's Brook the second time around.

Hawks Trim Bruins, Tackle Cats Tonight

Saskatoon Blades tossed a surprise at Brandon Wheat Kings Friday, but a Western Hockey League playoff contest in Vancouver went according to expectation.

The Western Division-topping Portland Winter Hawks, making the most of a decimated New Westminster lineup, trounced the Bruins 9-3 before only 3,503 fans in Vancouver's Pacific Coliseum.

Now 2-0 in the double round-robin semi-final series, Portland moves into Victoria this evening for a Memorial Arena game Cougar coach Jack Shupe considers "the important key" in his team's hopes of advancing to the next playoff plateau.

"It has to be a key game," said Shupe. "New Westminster (now 0-2) has blown the advantage of a game at home. All we have to do is to win all our remaining home games and that should take care of the Bruins."

The two top teams after the round-robin advance to a best-of-seven divisional final.

Missing eight players as the result of a March 22 brawl against Portland, the Bruins were in the game for only one period. Portland led 3-2 after the first, then poured on the power for its second straight victory.

The turnout of fans in the 15,000-seat Coliseum reflected the lower mainland's attitude towards the Bruins, defending Canadian champions, as a result of the brawl. Other Bruin "home" games shifted to the Coliseum during the regular season drew from 5,000 to 11,000 fans.

The night's surprise, however, came in Saskatoon when the hometown Blades edged the powerful Wheat Kings 5-4 before 4,314 delighted fans. Saskatoon now is 2-1 while Brandon is 1-1 in the Eastern Division showdown.

It wasn't easy. The Blades had to work hard and long before Terry Paskaruk's goal ended the game at 16:01 of a second overtime period.

Island Four Join Provincial Select

Four Vancouver Island standouts have been selected to play in the second annual Skyline high school boys' basketball classic.

Oak Bay's Wayne Andrews, Quinn Groenhyde and Greg Wiltjer of Parkland Panthers and Cowichan's Jim Larson were chosen to play for "the Province" against "Vancouver Metro" in the game between the top 20 graduating high school performers in British Columbia.

The game will be played next Saturday at the B.C. Institute of Technology.

Others selected to side with "the Province" are Dave Arthurs of Kamloops, Thad Elder of Penticton, Wayne Hales of Kelowna, David Netzmeier of Terrace, Jim Braich of Mission and Glenn Beach of Maple Ridge.

Flames Retain Hopes

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Flames have not given up their quest for a second-place finish in the Patrick Division of the National Hockey League.

The Flames moved two points closer to Philadelphia Flyers Friday night when Guy Chouinard scored two goals to lead Atlanta to a 5-3 victory over Los Angeles Kings.

Victory lifted Atlanta into a tie with Buffalo with 85 points in a scramble for home-ice advantage in the opening round of the NHL playoffs. The Flames are four points back of the Flyers.

"Atlanta played a very good game, very intense," Kings coach Bob Berry said. "We played a pretty good game too, but we made a few mistakes."

Chouinard's pair of goals gave the 22-year-old centre 48 for the year and 101 points. Earlier in the season, linemate Bob MacMillan became the first Flame to hit the 100-point mark.

Formidable Task For National Side In Bermuda Opener

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's national soccer team, fighting for berths in this summer's Pan-American Games and the 1980 Moscow Olympics, faces a formidable task in Sunday's double-barrelled opening game in Bermuda.

And being blown away early could cost Canada the works.

The team, well-rested but competitively untested, is pitted against the keen-edged and eager Bermudans, who have been sharpening their skills against European competition and several professional teams from the United States.

And it is a pressure-packed contest for two reasons.

The game against Bermuda marks the start of a week-long competition in which Canada plays Mexico and the United States. The two top teams advance to the Pan-American competition in Puerto Rico in July.

But the opener is also part of the Olympic qualification round.

Bermuda travels to Montreal May 27 for the second and final game in that match. The winner faces either Mexico or the U.S. for the northern zone championship and a shot at a playoff with two other zone finalists for a Moscow berth.

Eric King, executive-director of the Canadian Soccer Association, said he tried to get Bermuda to agree to play the Olympic trial game later in the summer.

But the Bermudans, sensing a distinct advantage in meeting a Canadian team idle since the youth tournament in December, balked at that suggestion.

"Bermuda and Mexico are at the end of their seasons while Canada has been sitting on her backside all winter."

A later date would have been difficult for Bermuda because cricket takes over there during the summer, King added.

Kevin Pipe, the association's youth co-ordinator, says the players are superbly fit. Some have come from British Columbia, including three from Victoria, where the soccer season runs all winter while others have been playing in the U.S. professional indoor league.

"But the main concern is that they have not played together as a team," he said.

Pipe was not sure how long it would take the players to get their act together.

Another problem facing the Canadian team is the loss of players to indoor and outdoor professional soccer.

In December, Canada qualified for the world youth tournament in Japan in August. But it cost them three players who promptly turned professional, including the national team goaler.

"It's frustrating," said King. "We invest time and money into player development only to lose them to the pros."

But soccer players, unlike other professional athletes, can have their cake and eat it too, King said.

Because the International Olympic Committee (IOC) relaxed its eligibility rules, a player can play professional soccer and remain an amateur.

The player receives living and travel expenses and is eligible for federal grants from Sport Canada.

As an amateur he is required to give only seven days notice and is free to travel the world with the national team.

The problem lies in convincing players to think of their country as well as their pocketbooks and show them it can be done, King said.

So far he has had little success.

Tornado Wrecks Cap Skein

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dallas Tornado defeated Vancouver 2-1 in a shootout Friday night to end the Whitecaps' North American Soccer League regular-season winning streak at 13 games.

The Whitecaps controlled play throughout the second half and scoreless overtime period, but squandered their chances in a rugged game delayed by a lighting failure, injuries, and a fight on the field.

Gomez gave the Tornado a 1-0 lead in the first half and Hector tied the game at 52 minutes.

Referee Roger Morgan appeared to lose control of the game early and Dallas finished with nine men and Vancouver ended regulation time with 10. Zaquinha, a speedy Brazillian winger who scored the only goal of the game in a Dallas victory over Detroit Express last week, set up the Tornado score in the first half.

He made two moves on Whitecap defender Bob McNab, turned him around, and put a through ball at the feet of midfielder Gomez who broke through two Vancouver defenders to beat Vancouver goalie Phil Parkes with a low shot from 10 yards.

Vancouver nearly tied the game at 52 minutes when a corner by Scottish International Willie Johnston into a melee in front of the Dallas net hit underneath the crossbar but was cleared by a Tornado defender.

Stepney was injured on the play but stayed in the game.

On the throw-in following the Dallas clear, Hector hammered home a loose ball created by Vancouver forward Trevor Wymark.

Vancouver had two other good scoring chances after a tentative attack in the first half, one when midfielder Jon Sammels fired over the crossbar following a free kick.

At 70 minutes, Dallas defender Steve Pecher almost caused an own goal when he tipped one of several Vancouver lobs into the box at the Tornado goal causing Stepney to make a leaping deflection as he fell backward.

Gomez was ejected with 11 minutes remaining in regulation time when he pushed Bolitho from behind.

Vancouver defender Roger Kenyon and Dallas George Ley were ejected following a fight with a minute remaining in regulation time.

Having the home-field advantage proved to be a disaster Friday's league matches.

In both other game played, the home club also came out on the short end of the score.

Tulsa Roughnecks invaded Seattle and tripped the Sounders 5-4 and Chicago Sting visited California and beat the Surf 2-1.

Davies' winner came after Seattle goalkeeper Clif Brown failed to intercept Woodward's corner kick. The ball bounded loose and Davies scored into an empty net.

Oilers Retain Grip on Lead

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — Edmonton Oilers maintained their grip on first place in the World Hockey Association standings Friday night with a 3-1 victory over New England Whalers.

The Oilers, one of four teams accepted into the National Hockey League next season, never trailed in the contest.

Bill Flett registered his 22nd goal on a breakaway to give Edmonton a 1-0 lead at 8:27 of the opening period. Dave Hunter's sixth goal, at 11:52 of the second period came on a soft flip shot as Whaler goalie John Garrett was screened on the play.

The Whalers countered with Mike Rogers 26th goal at 18:17.

Signs of Hope Appear In Car-Racing Dispute

A dispute between Western Speedway and the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association, which had threatened to disrupt stock car racing at the Langford oval, may be heading for a solution.

A Thursday meeting between Speedway manager Tony Mortel and VITRA executives and members resulted in "favorable headway" towards reaching a satisfactory solution.

Neither side would comment officially on the results of the meeting, preferring to wait until after the VITRA executive met with its general memership Tuesday.

The centre of the rift is VITRA's reluctance to give up "backgate money" it has received from racing.

Western's season is scheduled to open April 28.

TOM WATSON

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Clyde Mangum, the deputy commissioner for Professional Golfers' Association tour operations, looked at the big scoreboard that showed Tom Watson's name opposite the unlikely figure of 130.

"One thirty," mused Mangum. "That's not a golf score. It sounds more like the time of day."

And Watson, right on time in getting his game in gear for the upcoming Masters, predicted that things will be even better.

"I made a little change in my putting stance," he said Friday after a spectacular birdie-eagle-par-birdie finish for a second consecutive six-under-par 65 in the Heritage tournament on the demanding Harbour Town Golf Links.

"I've missed a few short chances. So I opened up my stance a little and I feel I'm seeing the line better this way, putting better. I'm certainly putting with more confidence."

He had eight one-putt greens and a no-putt eagle two that negated the ace Lanny Wadkins scored earlier in the day. He finished with three putts on the last four holes.

That put him 12 under par for two rounds, one shot off the record on one of the most demanding courses the touring pros encounter all season, and three in front of Wadkins, whose hole-in-one helped him to a 67 and a 133 total.

And, for the second consecutive week, it set up a head-to-head confrontation between the two most productive players of the season. Wadkins, a notorious streak player, is the only two-time victor of the year, winning by five shots over Watson last week in the wind-scoured Tournament Players Championship.

International Golf Shootout

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — An international shootout was in progress today between Nancy Lopez, South Africa's Sally Little and Chako Higuchi of Japan, co-leaders in the $150,000 Ladies Professional Golf Association tournament at Mesa Verde County Club.

Tied with three-under-par 139s, they entered today's third round with a two-stroke lead.

"Nancy's the target to shoot at, but there are 36 holes left and there are many, many players in the hunt," said Little, who has defeated Lopez twice in the past year and will be matched in the same threesome — along with rookie Beth Daniel.

Entering the second round at even par, Lopez and Little shot three-under-par 68s Friday to tie Higuchi, the first round leader who has carded rounds of 69-70.

Haguchi, winner of 43 tournaments in Japan and three events in other countries, one-putted six greens to save par.

Lopez, the rookie whiz of 1978 who is gunning for her third victory in four weeks, remedied a loose putting grip by wearing a glove.

Little, 27, unleashed six birdies over the long-playing 6,174-yard, par 71 course that was hit earlier this week by heavy rains.

Sandra Post, a native of Oakville, Ont., soared to a 77 and is at 147. Cathy Sherk of Port Colborne, Ont., shot a 72 and made the cut with a 150 total. Jocelyn Bourassa of Shawinigan, Que., continued to struggle as she shot a fat 87 for a 165 total.

Saanich Captures Tourney

Saanich won all three games in shutout style to emerge with top honors Friday in a Vancouver Island peewee football tournament at Royal Athletic Park.

Saanich blanked Victoria 18-0, clipped Gordon Head 7-0 and then beat Juan de Fuca 7-0 in the four-team, round-robin affair. Each team played six 20-minute quarters.

The other teams all compiled 1-2 records but Juan de Fuca placed second on the strenght of its better point spread. Juan de Fuca won its only game by blanking Gordon Head 12-0. That also was the margin in Gordon Head's victory over Victoria while the latter team scored a 13-12 decision over Juan de Fuca.

League play starts next week but all teams are still looking for players between the ages of 10-12. Players are asked to telephone 598-3235 for further information.

Umps Reject Pact Offers

CHICAGO (AP) — Fifty major league baseball umpires decided at a meeting Friday to reject contract offers from the National and American leagues.

Richie Phillips, the umpires' lawyer, said, "In no way can this be termed a strike. It's more of an action.

However, he added, "I am not optimistic that it will be settled before the opening of the season."

The regular season starts Wednesday in the American League and Thursday in the National League.

Paul Pryor of the National League has signed his contract for the 1979 season and may be the only regular umpire working when it begins. American League umpire Ted Hendry, a rookie last year, also signed before the current wage dispute.

But the other 50 umpires said they would stick together and would not sign their individual contracts.

"I don't think the umpires any longer have blind faith in the league presidents. We understand that local and minor league umpires will be used. This would provide an inferior product and cause total chaos in major league baseball," said Phillips.

He added that he will negotiate all 50 contracts. He said he planned to contact the two league presidents — Lee MacPhail of the American League and Chub Feeney of the National League — Friday night to tell them of the umpires' decision.

The two leagues had issued an ultimatum to the umpires — sign the contracts by midnight Friday, or be released and rehired only when staff openings become available.

Phillips said using minor leauge umpires would put a great strain on major league baseball.

The umpires were advised by Phillips not to talk to the media. However, American League veteran Ron Luciano, president of the Major League Umpires Association, said, "I don't have a job anymore, and I want one.

"After 10 years in the majors, I am making a salary of $32,500 and the only thing that I know is umpiring ... the only place I can umpire now is Japan.

"I don't think minor league umpires can do the job. We have heard some minor league umps said they will work and some said they will not. If I get back to work these minor league umpires will have to work for me, and I wouldn't like it. There is bound to be bad blood.

"There are 50 of us now against both leagues, and Phillips can bargain for all of us."

After a federal court judge ruled this week that he could not order the umpires back to work, the two leagues advised them of Friday's deadline.

Lack of Sponsor Erases British Tennis Event

BOURNEMOUTH, England (AP) — There will be no British hard court tennis championships here this year, it was announced Friday.

The championships, which were to have been held from Sept. 17-23, have been cancelled because the organizing committee cannot find a sponsor.

It only will be the second time that the championships, which began in 1924, have not been held. The last time was in 1977, also when a sponsor could not be found.

The hard court championship is the second major British tournament to be hit by a lack of sponsorship. The Lawn Tennis Association has had to organize an event at Surbiton after no sponsors were forthcoming for the pre-Wimbledon tournament usually held at either Nottingham or Birmingham.

Records Fall in Swim Meet

WINNIPEG (CP) — Nancy Garapick of Halifax won the 400-metre individual medley Friday at the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association winter nationals and Pam-Am trials and in so doing set a Canadian record and bettered the world's previous best time in the event this year.

Several other Canadian records also were set at the meet.

Garapick's time of four minutes, 41.43 seconds was 5.18 seconds faster than the Canadian record held by Cheryl Gibson of Toronto, who finished second to Garapick Friday.

"I believed I could do it if I hit my splits right," said Garapick after her stunning effort.

In the men's 100-metre freestyle, Bill Sawchuk of Thunder Bay, Ont., and Peter Szmidt of Pointe Claire, Que., tied with a time of 50.68 seconds, breaking Sawchuk's previous Canadian record 50.74.

Quebec City's Graham Welbourn won a bronze medal with a time of 51.11.

Gail Amundrud of Vancouver broke her own Canadian record of 56.20 in the women's 100-metre freestyle with a time of 56.07. She was followed by Anne Jardin of Pointe Claire at 56.23 and Carol Klimpel of Toronto at 56.25.

The women's 100-metre breaststroke was the only event of the night in which a new record was not set. Anne Gagnon of Quebec took the gold medal with a time of 1:11.21. Robin Corsiglia of Pointe Claire was second with 1:11.95, and Lisa Borsholt of Vancouver third with 1:12.77.

Graham Smith of Edmonton broke his own Canadian record and missed the world best mark by .96 seconds in the men's 100-metre breaststroke with a time of 1:01.96. Greg Wurzbach of Edmonton won the silver with a time of 1:03.42 and the Dave Miller of Ottawa the bronze with 1:03.80.

Sawchuk later beat Jim Fowlie's Canadian record 4:26.25 in the men's 400-metre individual medley with a time of 4:24.80. He was followed by 14-year-old Alex Bauman of Sudbury, Ont., at 4:25.80 and Duncan Cleworth of Toronto at 4:28.89.

In team events, Etobicoke Swim Club A squad won the women's 4-by-200-metre freestyle in the record-breaking time of 8:13.0, 6.47 seconds better than the previous record held by the Canadian Dolphins of Vancouver. In the men's 4-by-200-metre freestyle, Pointe Claire won with a time of 7:31.14, compared with the previous best of 7:35.79. Etobicoke A team was second at 7:31.78 and Hyack Swim Club of New Westminster, B. C., third in 7:35.29.

Music at UVic

At the University of Victoria this week, the School of Music will wrap up its 1978-79 concert schedule with a potpourri of musical offerings. The series begins Monday when a group of UVic faculty and student musicians will perform a selection of original compositions in the music building recital hall starting at 8 p.m.

Featured composers will include John Celona, Martin Bartlett and Rudolf Komorous. Participating in works to be performed are pianist Kathleen Solose, who will be featured in Celona's work for solo piano, Miniatures. Komorous' composition, 23 Poems about Horses, based on poems of the Chinese poet, Li Ho, is also on the program.

Bartlett's Air, Komorous' Rossi, and Celona's Tracking will be performed by the ensemble.

For this recital there is an admission fee of $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

A free concert will be presented on Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the University Centre Auditorium. Featured will be the UVic Wind Symphony conducted by Jesse Read, the UVic Brass Ensemble conducted by Louis Ranger, and a saxophone quartet. Compositions by Milhaud, Rossini, Bach, Vaughan Williams and Mailmann will be performed.

On Thursday there will be a jazz band concert with a program ranging from swing to jazz rock. Trumpet player Dave Dando of Victoria will lead the 17-piece group of local artists and UVic students in the concert taking place in the auditorium.

Tickets at $2 are now available at the University Centre box-office or at the door on the evening of performance.

SHARING a program of solos and duos at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, Sunday, April 8, will be guitarist Bryan Townsend, with flutist and recorder player James Kennedy. Both artists are faculty members of the Victoria Conservatory of Music. For the concert, which begins at 3 p.m., they have chosen a program of serious and not-so-serious music. Music for recorder and guitar by Handel and Hans Martin Linde, and for flute and guitar by Diabelli and Jacques Ibert will be performed. There will also be duos by Dowland, Johnson and Gaultier and solos by Domenico Scarlatti and Ennemond Gaultier. Admission to the concert is by donation to the conservatory bursary-scholarship fund.

Benefit Concert Tuesday

An attractive program by two notable international artists is to be presented Tuesday at McPherson Playhouse. Tenor Ronald Murdock and pianist Clifford Benson will be appearing under the auspices of the Multiple Sclerosis Society of Vancouver Island. Both artists are donating their talents to make this a benefit concert for the society.

Murdock, who comes from Nova Scotia originally, has lived in London since 1969. He has sung at the Bach Festival, the Aldeburgh, Windsor and Brighton Festivals, and by special invitation at the Yehudi Menuhin Festival in Gstaad, Switzerland, and the CBC Halifax Festival.

In January he gave two performances in Hong Kong with the Hong Kong Philharmonic Orchestra. At the moment he is in the midst of a Canadian tour. He broadcasts relgularly for the BBC recital series, as soloisjt with Musica Antigua and with the Merlot Trio.

Among appearances in Canada are recitals at most Maritime universities, TV specials for CBC Halifax and extensive recordings for the CBC in Ottawa and Halifax for both English and French networks.

Benson studied at the Royal College of Music prior to winning the BBC Beethoven Duo Competition and the Munich International Duo Competition.

Murdock and Benson will perform a program of operatic arias, Scottish ballads and popular songs. The concert starts at 8 p.m. Tickets for the benefit concert are $5 and are available at the McPherson box-office.

'Conservatory Touches Us All'

What does a columnist do when the battle lines are suddenly withdrawn? When a thorny problem is resolved overnight? Is she — or he — like a person leaning heavily against an obdurate door which suddenly opens inward and throws him/her into an off-balance sprawl?

Of course not. Most people who write or otherwise handle opinion pieces become pretty adroit at switching the weight to another foot, behind another shoulder and against yet another door. The interesting thing about human affairs, large and small, is that there are so many obdurate doors against which to hurl oneself.

This weekend, however, for this column there is one less door to lean on. It opened smoothly and widely a week ago, thanks to solid community support and perceptive government action. With the announcement by Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis that the Conservatory of Music would be enabled to depart from Craigdarroch Castle into the doubly capacious St.Ann's Annex, the collective sigh of relief may have budged Craigdarroch's stone walls by at least a millimeter or so.

It's been a long time coming; almost too long. Not many more months would have passed before the Woods, Robin and Winifred — so vital to the unique and beneficial ambience of the Conservatory — would have been assessing their ability to remain suspended in a state of almost complete frustration. And not only they, but other valued teachers and senior students as well, in the continual contest for teaching and practice room and time, would soon have begun to disappear.

Well, all that changed last week. The interest and action of Sam Bawlf as minister of conservation and recreation was followed up by Curtis in his newly devised ministry of government services. The move of the B.C. Building Corporation, which owns the annex, into Curtis' ministry, helped clear the way so that the Conservatoy can look forward to being rehoused by the time the fall term opens.

The present 1,284 students, and all those others who are inevitably waiting in the wings, will be the major beneficiaries of the new quarters and freer schedules.

When Curtis called it one of the province's most important cultural institutions he was saying nothing but what is true.

And as far as grant-making bodies are concerned, he touched on a crucial point when he added: "yet it operates without debt and with only a minimum of government support."

"I am mindful that no talented student is turned away from the Conservatory," he said. "Even though 80 per cent of its budget comes from students' tuition, the school always finds a way to help a talented student with limited finances."

Generations of music students for years to come will have reason to be grateful that one government ministry had the foresight and the fortitude to cut through bureaucracy with a clear decision. A decision broad enough in all its ramifications to provide a major beneficial impact for a priceless institution.

Having arrived at this point, which will initiate a third and vital stage in the Conservatory's development, it's appropriate to reflect on the forces and the persons involved in initiating the earlier stages. People like Jack Barraclough, a president of the Victoria Symphony board in the fifties and sixties; and Hans Gruber, from 1948 to 1963, conductor of the symphony. These are the two who first conceived the idea of a school of music, initially for the prime purpose of training orchestral musicians.

Barraclough, a genius fund-raiser whose like has not recurred since he retired from the Victoria scene, got together the then impressive sum of $30,000 to launch the school. The school's orientation toward orchestral training automatically indicated that the Victoria Symphony music director would fill the post of principal. Gruber having left the city by this time, the choice was his successor, Otto-Werner Mueller.

At this point the first crunch came. Where would the school be housed? All manner of ideas were scouted, even including a vacant supermarket store at the Oak Bay Junction. Then someone mentioned that the Union Centre had moved to Quadra and its former home on Pandora, a concrete building with a small auditorium, was up for sale.

At this point, Mrs. Massy Goolden, a member of the founding group, stepped in, purchased the building and handed it over to the school committee. It was Mrs. Goolden's first but not by any means her last supportive gesture. In fact, throughout the 15 years of the Conservatory's life, she has been its good angel.

It was she, when the school of music outgrew Pandora, who succeeded in persuading the city to make Craigdarroch Castle its next home. Whenever, in fact, there has been a crunch, this quiet and unassuming lady has come to the rescue in one way and another, and if it had not been for her dedication and substantial support, there would, very probably, not now be a Conservatory of Music in this city.

There are of course many whose names deserve to be recorded for their diligent and unselfish support. People who have served several terms on the board, or have assisted in other numerous ways: Virginia Grant; Rodney Webster, who has been on the faculty since the beginning and was assistant principal for a time. But to name only a few is an injustice to so many others.

However what must be said in any review of the Conservatory story is that the stepping into the principal's post in 1967 of Robin Wood, gifted in personality as well as musically, changed a static situation and set the course for the incredible decade of growth that followed. When first invited to come, through the initiative of Mrs. Jay Durand (former noted Canadian pianist Gertrude Huntley Green), Dr. Wood, a Victoria native son, and his Canadian-born wife, Winifred Scott, were members of the faculty of the Royal Academy of Music in London. Both were also engaged in busy performance careers.

It was a fine-edge decision for them, especially so when, on learning of the possibility of their return to Canada, the Acadmey offered Wood the post of vice-principal.

The fact that they did come, with their two young children, created an endowment, the dividends of which will continue to enlarge and and be enjoyed in this city and beyond, through the forseeable future.

As Hugh Curtis said: "We take pride that many of the Conservatory's graduates have brought distinction to our province by winning provincial and national competitions and by succeeding as professional musicians in Canada and abroad."

To which must be added the fact that many young artists' successes are the shared result of an affiliation between the Conservatory and the University of Victoria fine arts faculty which took place in 1968.

Biblical Drama At Metropolitan

ANDERSON . . . solo performance

One of the few British professional actors to concentrate on solo performance, John Stuart Anderson has aroused great interest among audiences of all ages with his powerful Biblical dramas. He has also appeared throughout Britain, Europe and North America in Hamlet, Dr. Faustus, and the Christus in the York Mystery Plays. His solo repertoire includes Portrait of Dorian Gray; Good Evening, Lord Byron; Akhnaton, King of Egypt, and Biblical dramas and programs written by himself.

The Metropolitan Church Fine Arts Council is sponsoring this rare actor in one of his most arresting monodramas, The Record of St.John, to be presented in the sanctuary of Metropolitan United Church at Pandora and Quadra, Tuesday at 8 p.m.

Two of Anderson's Biblical dramas have been recorded on disc and cassette and three of his original Gothic macabre stories have been released by Columbia records. Anderson has appeared at the Shakespeare Festival Theatre at Stratford, the Royal Festival Hall in London, and the National Cathedral in Washington.

AROUND THE GALLERIES

A one-man exhibition of the recent paintings of James Gordaneer, R.C.A., opens Sunday at Kyle's Gallery, 1545 Fort (Oak Bay Junction). The preview showing will be available to all visitors from 12 to 10 p.m. Thereafter, until May 3, the exhibition of gouache and oil paintings will be on view at regular hours of 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Tuesday through Sunday, and 7:30 p.m. to 10 p.m., Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Retaining his gallery connection in the East, where he continues to exhibit regularly, Gordaneer moved to Victoria in 1976 and has attracted a strong following on the west coast.

An original painter, skilled and sensitive as a colorist, Gordaneer produces paintings rich in form and movement, with an attractive freedom and fluency which seems to derive from the artist's sheer joy in the act of painting. Essentially self-taught, learning through his own experience, which has included extensive travels through Europe and Mexico, he has had numerous one-man shows throughout Ontario and in Quebec.

He is represented in the collections of several universities and corporations, including Queen's, University of Victoria, Imperial Oil and Crown Life. His work is also included in the McMichael Collection in Klineberg, Ont., and in the Canada Council Art Bank, Ottawa.

Although his commitment as an artist has always come first, Gordaneer has also taught extensively in Ontario colleges and universities, and now continues to teach part-time at UVic and the Victoria College of Art.

The work of 30 University of Victoria visual arts students is currently on view through April 19 at the Maltwood Art Museum and Gallery in the University Centre. The exhibition features student paintings, drawing, photographs, print-making and sculpture.

Among artists exhibiting are printmaker Doris Kochanek and painter Phyllis Serota, whose work has been included in showings at the Media Gallery. Painter Kim Adams, who participated in the Invitational Show at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria recently, is also included in the collection. Some of the larger pieces are located outside the gallery in the University Centre foyer and at N Hut on campus.

To coincide with the School of Music performance of Mendelssohn's oratorio, Elijah, the gallery will be open on Friday at 7 p.m. and on Sunday at 2:30 p.m. Regular hours are Monday to Friday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. However, the gallery will be closed Tuesday and Wednesday next week.

Westcoast Mosaic is the title of an exhibition of gouaches by Doris Hryciuk at The Backroom Gallery, 2070 Oak Bay. The preview takes place Tuesday from 7:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. Closing date for the show is April 21.

Hryciuk was born in Germany and studied art for three years there before coming to Canada in 1962. She studied briefly in Halifax but came to Victoria in 1970 and attended the Victoria College of Art here, becoming strongly influenced by Jack Wise's "Painting from Nature Analysis."

She has previously been included in group shows at the Backroom Gallery and the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria.

Canadian Play Lauded

A thoroughly Canadian play that has created a considerable stir on both sides of the border is the next and last production by Bastion Theatre for this subscription season.

Artichoke, by Joanna Glass, will be given its west coast premiere under the direction of Ronald Ulrich, starting at McPherson Playhouse Friday and running through April 21. Previous productions, including the first at the Long Wharf Theatre in Connecticut, have stirred an enthusiastic press.

Words like witty, discerning and intelligent were used in New York Times and San Francisco Chronicle reviews. Closer to home, the Montreal Star spoke of it as "exploding with laughter yet capable of causing an occasional lump in the throat." Artichoke has also delighted audiences in Ontario, Saskatchewan and Theatre Calgary.

The story is set in Glass' own Saskatchewan and concerns Margaret, drying out in her 15-year marriage to Walter, who is banished to sleep in the smokehouse since his indiscretion with a water witch. There comes upon the rural scene Margaret's distant relative, Gibson McFarland, an intellectual who provides a welcome diversion in her routine life.

The disruption is less welcome to her father, and to Walter, who leaves home altogether to live with bachelor neighbors. The action of the play then continues with gossipy wisdom from the bachelors, and Gibson's anguishing over an identity crisis, to its only possible ending.

There will be a series of Reunion Nights during the run of Artichoke, when Bastion Theatre will welcome local and visiting graduates from any prairie high school or university. Special recognition evenings will occur on April 8, 10 and 11.

BROODING over his domestic trials, Walter (John Krich) contemplates leaving his wife Margaret (Lally Cadeau) and daughter Lily-Agnes (Susan Gillatt) in Artichoke, Bastion Theatre's forthcoming Canadian play of Prairies warmth and humor. It opens at the McPherson April 6 for a two-week run.

Young Playwright Gaining Fame

TORONTO (CP) — George F. Walker, who at 30 is a leading playwright in Toronto's alternative theatre, is feeling disoriented.

While his plays have not been presented or even much recognized in the rest of Canada, he suddenly has found himself to be a hot item internationally.

Last month, Walker's comic melodrama Zastrozzi was optioned for likely inclusion in next year's schedule at New York's Public Theatre.

The play had considerable success at Toronto Free Theatre last year and was one of the runners-up for the annual Chalmers Award for best new Canadian play last year.

Zastrozzi also completed a three-week run this winter in London, England, where its production by the Wakefield Tricycle Co. received short but enthusiastic reviews.

Robert Cushman of The Observer called it the best Canadian play he has seen.

The fact that it was inspired by Percy Byshe Shelley's novel of the same name probably helped give it an English flavor and its opening during the Christmas season, a meagre time for opening, also probably helped.

Walker, who wrote the first of his eight plays when he was 23, seems unfazed by the recognition he has received. He sees it more as a chance to reach out to a different audience, to escape the confines of the introverted and isolated world of Toronto alternate theatre.

While people in the rest of Canada seem to regard Walker as another overpraised, over-funded wonderboy from Factory Theatre Lab, theatre-goers in the United States feel differently.

Gossip, which Toronto Free Theatre presented in 1977, was not much of a success here but a Seattle theatre produced it last year and, almost immediately, Walker began hearing from other U.S. theatres.

Ivan Head seas himself as a salesman for international development in Canada

Ex-PM Aide Now 'Selling' Foreign Aid

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — Ivan Head has moved from behind the curtains in the prime minister's office to a centre-stage role in international development.

The 48-year-old president of the International Development Researh Centre (IDRC) sees himself as something of a salesman for international development in Canada as well as helmsman for he $37-million-a-year research body.

But the former lawyer, diplomat and professor still carries with him the careful diplomatic style he wore as Prime Minister Trudeau's behind-the-scenes foreign policy adviser for 10 years.

Head is so discreet that knowledgeable people in international development circles say that even a year after he took over as president, they still don't know in which direction he plans to take the IDRC.

The slight, shy man, a major influence on Trudeau's foreign policy, was chosen ahead of 39 other candidates for the $55,000-a-year job.

The federally funded organization was set up by the government in the late 1960s to pay for research by people in developing countries.

Head calls it one of the most selfless exercises that any country has attempted because other foundations in wealthy nations channel funds to their own researchers.

But the IDRC is not well known in Canada, and Head suspects the same is true of Canada's foreign development aims generally.

"One of the reasons I welcome this new responsibility is that it gives me an opportunity to go forth and attempt to acquaint people with my perception of what the world is," he said in a recent interview.

He blames the recent government freeze on foreign aid, including his own budget, on lack of public knowledge and support of Canada's development assistance programs.

While disappointed with the freeze, he is careful to avoid criticizing the federal cabinet. Federal spending restraints had to "reflect those cuts that the public thinks enjoy a lower priority than some others."

Hence, Head's public speeches now stress the importance of international aid and the work of the IDRC.

Foreign aid isn't charity, but is almost as important to developed countries as it is to the poor countries they are helping, he says.

Many economists now recognize that the economies of poor and rich countries are closely linked — trade with developing countries would grow as these nations grew economically.

"It is people like me that have to assume some of the responsibility that this message hasn't got through."

Head also is concentrating on explaining the work of the IDRC because Canadians "should know what their tax money is going to."

But one international development expert says there is much concern within the IDRC over not knowing what direction Head is taking.

"I think that's something he really needs to clarify both within and without the IDRC," the expert says. "How will he be different from David Hopper?"

Alamos, a City Time Has Already Forgotten

BY ELSON IRWIN

ALAMOS, Sonora — If there were to be an opportunity to pretend you were in a time machine, whisked back to the 17th century, it would be here in the foothills of the Sierra Madre Occidental.

There was a time when this town in Mexico was called Real de los Frailes. In 1684, the name was changed to Real de las Minas de la Purisima Concepcion de los Alamos.

No one knows when it was shortened to Alamos.

Driving through the surrounding area is much like driving through a national park in the United States. From the Sonora desert at sea level, the two-lane road leading into Alamos slowly climbs through a black volcanic outcropping into the foothills where cactuses and thorny bushes give way to miniature trees.

The logical jumping-off place for heading to Alamos is Guaymas, a city nestled in a tight little bay off the Sea of Cortez in northern Sonora.

Near Guaymas — 12 miles away — is the resort of San Carlos, where many Americans live and play.

But back to Alamos, where there is time to reflect on the past. There are a few scattered adobes on the outskirts, but little is seen until you drop into the valley of Alamos.

There stands this city of the past, a splendor of buildings obviously Andalusian — probably because the principal builders came from Seville and Cadiz in Spain.

It is the dry season, and the underabrush is a tangled mass of brown twigs; patches of hot pink splash down the slopes and the ravines, and the flowers of the amapa trees add their beauty to the landscape.

Majestic Mount Alamos protects the valley to the south. A small boy whips a burro loaded down with sticks along the narrow street. The car bumps from macadam to cobblestones. The city is not Mexican at all, but Spanish.

The church dominates the center of town. Prominent colonial families built their manorial homes as close to the church as possible, originally for protection against the Indians, later as status symbols.

West of the church is the lyric portal or arcade. It inspired the Alamos poet and composer Margarita Almada to call her birthplace Ciudad de los Portales. The bulbous Doric columns supporting the arches are unique to Alamos.

The plaza is more like something you would see in Europe. Although the leading families left Alamos after the silver mines closed in 1909, the remaining inhabitants have kept the city pure in appearance and spirit.

After a plague had wiped out 6,000 inhabitants in 1770, King Charles III of Spain sent a surveyor-general to lay out the streets of Alamos so that squatters could not build shacks in the center of town.

The great mansions were built then. No modern equipment was used; every phase of the work was done by hand.

Down one residential street, you can find the Casa de los Tesoros, built in 1789, as a private home, but later a convent. Now it is a hotel and restaurant, serving exquisite meals. But never is there a menu.

The Casa de los Tesoros chef served a wonderful nutmeg-carrot soup prepared that morning. A cucumber salad followed, then a tantalizing veal dish, smothered in three kinds of cheese and tomato sauce. Veal is hard to find in this part of Mexico, but the Tesoro serves it often.

Across from the palace is a private home which once was a Japanese silk factory. From mulberry trees and silkworms to the weaving of the material, all processes were accomplished behind these walls.

The telegraph office, small shops, restaurants, cantinas and the marketplace compete for business. All the goods and services for ranchers who come in from the country can be found here.

Only in the marketplace are the signs garishly painted and not well done. But, if you lift your eyes, the wrought-iron balconies provide special interest to the otherwise plain facade.

The "reja" or grille with the spear tips on the window is native to Alamos.

The church was started in 1786 on the site of a 17th century church built of adobe. It was finished in 1804.

Baja California: Some See Another Miami Beach

By Bill Parry

San Jose is a quiet fishing village near the top of Mexico's Baja California, where the sun spends the summer, the winter and all other seasons.

On any day but Sunday, the loudest noise in the tropical village comes from children playing in the streets. On Sundays, it is the church bell announcing mass.

But all that beautiful peace and quiet may soon be drowned out by the clatter of bulldozers and progress, if the real estate experts are correct. A total of 84 million pesos will be invested there this year alone in hotel and resort facilities, according to the Mexican Tourist Bureau.

Some experts predict San Jose and the rest of Baja California has the potential to become the next Miami Beach, French Riviera or Canary Islands, catering to the world's wealthy, who are always looking for the sun and another place to relax.

"The potential (of the 800-mile-long peninsula) taxes the imagination," said Alan N. Nevin, a nationally known real estate planning consultant.

Nevin agreed with Richard Robbins of San Antonio, Texas.

"Baja is the last place in the world like this," said Robbins, who publishes a real estate newsletter 20 times a year.

"Baja has everything — the balmy weather, the beaches and the price is right," said Nevin in an interview.

However, what happens in the years ahead will depend on the governments of Baja. Will they protect foreign investors who want to build a home or hotel? Will they refrain from expropriating holdings of foreigners as happened back in 1938?

"That's the crux of the whole matter," Robbins said in a telephone interview.

Baja's deserts, streams and towering mountains still look pretty much as they did when the first Spanish explorers stepped ashore there in 1533. It is literally untouched, with hundreds of unused surfing beaches, clear-water lagoons, fabulous clam-digging beaches and whale-watching sites. The nights are so clear that hundreds of missiles orbiting the Earth can be seen with the naked eye.

But now the government of Baja California, under Gov. Roberta de la Madrid, is encouraging tourism and investments below the border. De la Madrid is American-born and American-oriented.

Oh, the American outdoorsmen and tourists have flocked in — at the rate of more than 100,000 vehicles per year bumping along the 1,000-mile trans-peninsular highway. To accommodate them, some hotels and gas stations were constructed. The changes have been minimal. It is still largely untouched.

That is, it was untouched until a few years ago.

"You know, every once in a while you read a story in the Wall Street Journal about a big hotel development going in down there," said Nevins. "That's a bunch of malarky. But it is going to happen. It is going to come."

Nevin, an executive of the Sanford R. Goodkin Co. of Del Mar, Calif., said three new residential developments in the southern portion of the peninsula indicate what lies ahead for Baja..

"I think there will be tremendous growth in Baja within the next decade. There are three areas that are absolute dynamite," Nevin said. They are near La Paz, a city of 50,000 persons.

"People from all over the world would like to invest down there — so they could live there or just put their money there. It has the weather, the beautiful topography and the fishing is fantastic. Plus the people are friendly and the prices are right compared with the French Riviera. It's only a two-hour flight from California.

"The French Riviera makes you feel inferior. They look down their noses at you, but the people in Mexico make you feel at home."

Mexican officials said Bajamar, an international resort community 20 miles north of Ensenada, is an example of the new developments on the drawing board or under construction. It is the first resort community to open to American buyers since the inauguration of Gov. de la Madrid began a new era of friendship between Baja California and its neighbors in California.

"The new governor, who was born and educated in the United States, has taken personal leadership in encouraging American investment in Baja," said Mario J. Casco, president of the Bajamar project. He said several houses owned by Americans are nearing completion at the 1,454-acre coastal development overlooking the Pacific.

So far more than $21.3 million has been invested in land, paved and lighted streets, utilities, golf course and a 28,000-square-foot clubhouse at the site.

The homes are being built under what are called 30-year "interests" (land leases). The California Department of Real Estate authorized Bajamar to sell the leases to Californians in 1976.

Al Boeke, an architect who formerly headed the development of Sea Ranch in Northern California, headed the Bajamar project until recently. He resigned to resume private practice and will remain as a consultant to Bajamar.

Boeke said earlier that present Mexican law prohibits foreigners from outright ownership of land within 32 miles of the coastline. Hence they must lease building sites.

Robbins said he thought the Mexican government should give assurances to foreign investors that they will not be ousted from their land at the whim of changing government administrations in Mexico.

But Nevin and Homero Reyes, a private economic consultant in San Diego, Calif., said the possibility of another government takeover in Mexico today is nil. "The Mexican government can't ever kick anybody out again," said Reyes. "They need the jobs, they have to have tourism and we are too tied into each other. The conditions of 1940 (the era of expropriation) no longer exist."

Nevin said recent discovery of vast petroleum resources in Mexico ultimately will strengthen the ties between Mexico and the United States.

"It may not look like it now, but they will be selling us their oil and they will be using the money to buy our technology to bring Mexico up to date," said Nevin.

"This will bring the two countries closer together than ever."

Performance In the Hills

The Pitlochry Festival Theatre, Scotland's Theatre in the Hills, will open its annual summer season on May 11, with Alan Ayckbourn's hilarious comedy, 'Bedroom Farce'. It is among six plays which will remain in the repertoire until the season ends on Oct. 6. Other presentations include Bernard Shaw's Arms and the Man and Noel Coward's Private Lives. Pitlochry, a favourite tourist resort, is 69 miles north of Edinburgh.

JAPANESE FACES are common in San Francisco. It's only in the spring that such uncommon faces as the one in the picture appear in the city's Nihonmachi (Japantown). The mustache and eyebrows belong to a colossal reproduction of Daruma, the bounce-back doll beloved by Japanese children.

Festival Time

SAN FRANCISCO — San Francisco's Cherry Blossom Festival is a feast of photogenic faces, arresting costumes and exotic rites.

It will be presented for the 12th consecutive year from April 13-15 and 20-22 in that quarter of the city known as Nohonmachi (Japantown).

Probably no other U.S. ethnic observance attracts so much participation from abroad. Every spring hundreds of Japanese travel here from Japan to join the festival cast. So do thousands of Californians of Japanese descent.

Their pride of heritage is expressed in music, dance, films, food, horticulture and art.

The principal showcase for this six-day spectacle is the pagoda-crowned Japan Center at Post and Buchanan Streets. Among the attractions to be seen there are exhibits and demonstrations of brush painting, calligraphy, flower-arranging, doll-making, paper-sculpting, the tea ceremony and the martial arts.

The extraordinary parade that concludes the celebration features huge troupes of performers, graceful floats, portable shrines and other seldom-seen Asian artifacts.

Game Fishing

The Bermuda Department of Tourism offers certificates and sterling silver pins for top catches of 17 varieties of game fish found in local waters. The tournament is open to visitors from May through November. No licence and no entry fee required.

Puerto Vallarta, Paradise With Plumbing

PUERTO VALLARTA, Mexico — A few sprinkles fell today but the spirit wasn't dampened.

First of all, you don't come to Puerto Vallarta to complain about the weather. Nor do you take Puerto Vallarta seriously; you just learn to live with it and enjoy it.

It's been this way for more than 100 years. Ever since Guadalupe Sanchez settled his family here in 1851, right on the Cuale River. He was a wise man, that guy Sanchez. He chose a prime location. The river is where rich Americans came later to build their homes. So now they call it Gringo Gulch.

To stir memories, we had lunch today at the Oceana. It's the hotel where I stayed the first time I came to Puerto Vallarta.

That was in 1962 and the prices were outrageously inexpensive. A room with meals for two persons cost $14. Even though the hotels weren't elegant, nobody seemed to care.

In those days tourists arrived by propeller airplane. A DC-6, as I recall. It unloaded passengers at a ramshackle old terminal that was held together only by baling wire and hope.

It was insane to drive. The road was unpaved and filled with potholes for 100 bone-cracking miles.

In town there were no telephones, no TV, no traffic lights. Only a radiophone. And because of the static it was next to impossible to hear the person you were calling.

"Louder!" you would scream. But it did no good.

This was the charm of Puerto Vallarta in 1962, this idea of shutting out the world.

Only fishermen and a handful of vacationers came regularly. It was the Poor Man's Riviera. When big passenger ships dropped anchor offshore the locals would row out in dugout canoes. They took along corn and beans and chili to sell to the crews. Now there is a pier and everybody comes ashore in water taxis.

Although Puerto Vallarta has grown up, it's still the safest place in Mexico. There is almost no crime. A few petty thefts, maybe. That's about all. Being a cop in Puerto Vallarta is a breeze.

I remember when they rounded up stray pigs and goats and put them in jail. The police kept the animals until the owners bailed them out.

Back in '62 the Oceana was everybody's hangout. Sometimes the bar remained open all night. Next morning the hotel's guests would stagger downstairs cursing the mariachis who had kept them awake till dawn.

Pura Bilboa from Spain was the proprietress. There were plans, she said, to pave the road clear to Guadalajara. "But I hope it is never. Too many tourists could ruin this beautiful place."

Well, the road did get paved. But Puerto Vallarta survived. And it hasn't been blighted as Senorita Bilboa had feared. Not like other places have. If anything, its gets better.

While the Oceana still does business, the majority of visitors put up in the newer hotels. The Posada Vallarta for one. The Garza Blanca for another.

We're staying at the Camino Real. It was Puerto Vallarta's first high-rise. For a high-rise it isn't bad. The rooms are clean and comfortable and the service is good.

During the day trinket salesmen wander among bathers on Las Estadas Beach. Then toward evening the serape salesmen take over. And after they are gone a woman with lace shawls appears.

There are several good restaurants in town. The Casablanca for one. La Fonda del Sol for another. La Fonda is owned by a German named Bruno who did a stint at the Mandarin Hotel in Hong Kong. The restaurant has a sunken bar with pillows and a reputation for other romantic nonsense.

And there is Daquiri Dick's, where you can get the best you-know-whats in Mexico.

El Patio still gets good crowds, as does La Margaita and Carlos 'n' Charlie's. Everyone goes to Carlos 'n' Charlie's at least once. I ran into my attorney, Howard Price.

He was studying the decor: life preservers, fans, old typewriters, a vintage Singer sewing machine, a gramophone. At Carlos 'n' Charlie's milk pails make do for wine buckets and an ancient espresso machine gathers dust.

Puerto Vallarta is accused of being a bit too touristy. They say this about every place that a jet goes these days. Few, though, would have been satisfied with the way it was before they put up window screens and got hot water. The tourists didn't really want cold shaves or to be chewed up by mosquitos because the windows had to be left open to keep one from suffocating.

What they really were looking for was paradise with plumbing — and that's Puerto Vallarta today.

Soccer Games

Soccer matches are held in Bermuda on weekends September through May. Cricket is the summer spectator sport, highlighted by the annual Cup Match Cricket Festival held in early August.

GREAT LITTLE WELSH TRAINS

There are several steam operated narrow guage railways in North and Mid Wales which date back to over a century ago, when these little engines used to puff along mountain tracks hauling iron or coal.

ONE MILLION

Over one million visitors per year take advantage of riding on the railways, which include the Festiniog Railway, a slate hauling line running into the foothills of Snowdonia; the Talyllyn Railway which runs from Tywyn on Cardigan Bay into the countryside past Dolgoch viaduct; the Snowdon Mountain Railway; the Vale of Rheidol Railway which leaves Aberystwyth mainline station and climbs steeply to scenic Devil's Bridge.

BALA LAKE

Most recent of the railways is the one at Bala Lake in Gwynedd which has been extended to cover the whole length of Lake Bala, Wales' largest lake. A seven-day unlimited travel ticket can be purchased at any terminus, some British rail stations and Tourist Information Centres in North and Mid Wales.

Discovering British Columbia

Historic Quilchena

By Murphy Shewchuk

Historic Hotel Quilchena, located in the heart of the Nicola Valley's cattle country, opened at a time when life moved at an entirely different pace.

Built by Nicola Valley pioneer rancher Joseph Guichon in 1907-08, the ornate, white wood-frame hotel reflected a grandeur then unknown outside of Vancouver or Victoria. For the well-to-do ranchers and businessmen of the valley, it was the place to meet.

Today, the style and pace of that era are reflected in a hotel that is among the oldest operating in the B.C. Interior.

This 14-room stopping place is located alongside Highway 5, about 20 kilometres northeast of Merritt.

During the hotel's early days, polo games were common on the nearby meadowland. The hills, on more than one occasion, echoed with baying hounds accompanying a "fox" hunt — foxes being in short supply, the dogs and riders settled for a poor coyote. Horse racing and rodeos at the nearby ranches and Indian reserves gave those not quite up to polo a chance to show ther skill and stamina.

After the activities, the spacios stand-up bar quenched many a thirst before British Columbia's experiment in prohibition closed it and, in 1919 the hotel.

For nearly four decades the Hotel Quilchena sat idle though not empty. Joseph Guichon Jr., the son of the pioneer, lived in the "mansion", keeping the winter fires stoked with coal and wood from the nearby Quilchena Creek valley.

In 1958, Guy Rose, and grandson of the builder and the new owner of the 10,100 hectare (25,000 acre) Quilchena Ranch, decided to reopen it to the public. Four years late a sizeable chunk of the polo field was converted into a nine-hole golf course to serve the needs of valley residents and visitors.

Today Guy Rose keeps the Hotel Quilchena open from May to October "to keep it from going to ruin" and to serve those interested in relaxing in an entirely different setting.

The rooms are vintage 1908 equipped with much of the original furnishings and show few signs of age. In the honeymoon suite, for instance, the double bed with its two-metre-high carved wood headboard seems too valuable for just sleeping. A china basin and pitcher stand on one dresser while the huge mirror on the other is flanked by two stone hot-water bottles. A rocking chair waits in the corner in anticipation of a reader with a good book.

Good ranch-style meals are available in the dining room or light meals and snacks can be had in the coffee shop.

If the relaxing gets a little boring, there is the golf course, boats for rent on Nicola Lake or horseback riding in the nearby hills. There are even some abandoned gold diggings within hiking distance of the old hotel.

Evenings can be spent enjoying the night life of Merritt or curled up with a book in the Victorian parlor lounge — complete with an 1884 square grand piano.

Richardson Won't Run

WINNIPEG (CP) — Former defence minister James Richardson formally put aside his personal career in politics Friday for a full-time crusade against the language policies of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Richardson told a news conference he will not seek re-election to the House of Commons in the May 22 election and is taking on the job of national chairman of Canadians for One Canada.

"My main message is I am not leaving the battle for Canadian unity," he said. "I am joining the battle for Canadian unity on an even larger front."

Richardson resigned from the federal cabinet in the fall of 1976 because of his staunch opposition to Trudeau's hopes for enshrining French- and English-language rights in a new constitution — together with a Quebec veto over future constitutional amendments.

Last summer, he severed his remaining ties with the Liberal party to sit as an independent in the Commons.

Richardson — and Canadians for One Canada — believe national unity is best fostered by having English as the country's only official language.

During the election campaign, Canadians for One Canada plan to support candidates who share their views on language and hope to make their presence felt through calls to open-line radio shows and letters to editors of newspapers.

Little is known about the group and its following other than the membership of its advisory council. It claims a membership of 20,000, including 2,500 in Quebec.

Lang's Name Pops At Probe of RCMP

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP argued, at a 1972 meeting attended by Otto Lang and Jean-Pierre Goyer, that politicians rather than judges should authorize police wiretaps because judges might demand details and learn that "unorthodox (perhaps illegal) methods (trespassing)" were involved in planting wiretaps.

It was the first time that Lang's name has come up at the inquiry into whether ministers knew of RCMP lawbreaking. Lang was justice minister from 1972 to 1976.

Notes of the meeting taken by retired RCMP Commissioner W. L. Higgitt and RCMP Inspector J. V. Cain, officer in charge of the force's legal branch in 1972, were produced Friday before a royal commission into RCMP wrongdoing.

The three-page Cain record said that Goyer, then solicitor-general, suggested it might be easier for "responsible ministers, rather than judges, to justify this type of police action to the public."

Cain said Higgitt "strongly attacked" a proposal that a wiretap law contain a provision that illegally-obtained evidence not be admissible in court. Higgitt said this rule had caused "enormous problems for justice and paved the way for the criminal element" in the United States.

"The minister of justice (Lang) acknowledged this and observed it should receive some form of review," the Cain notes added.

Higgitt's personal notes of the March 14, 1972, meeting said that Goyer "appeared to be satisfied" and Lang "seemed receptive to our suggestions."

However, the wiretap law, passed in 1974 required police to get authorization from superior court judges and ruled out illegally-obtained evidence.

Goyer $10,000 Payout In Libel Case Reversed

TORONTO (UPC) — The Ontario Court of Appeal Friday overturned a decision ordering Jean-Pierre Goyer to pay an employee $10,000 in libel damages for remarks made while he was minister of supply and services.

A three-judge panel of the court reversed a Supreme Court of Ontario finding in favor of Supply and Services official Lawrence Stopforth, ruling that Goyer's remarks to reporters outside the house were made under qualified privilege.

The alleged libel arose after Goyer told the House of Commons he had been misinformed by his officials about the status of financing for 18 long-range patrol aircraft to be purchased for the Department of National Defence.

He told the house "I do not believe that ministerial responsibility extends to cases of misinformation or gross negligence," and later repeated the remarks to reporters.

Supreme Court Justice Arthur Jessup ruled Friday that "the electorate, as represented by the media, has a real and bona-fide interest in the demotion of a senior civil servant for an alleged dereliction of duty.

"It would want to know if the reasons given in the House were the real and only reasons for the demotion. The appellant (Goyer) has a corresponding public duty and interest in satisfying that interest of the electorate.

"Accordingly, there being no suggestion of malice I would hold that the alleged defamatory statements were uttered on an occasion of qualified privilege."

Jessup added that his decision did not impute gross negligence to Stopforth.

Indecent Assault

RED DEER (CP) — James Edward (Ted) Bower, 45, editor of the Red Deer Advocate, received an 18-month suspended sentence in provincial court Friday on a charge of indecent assault on a male.

Bower pleaded guilty last week in connection with an incident involving a 15-year-old male in the sauna room of a city swimming pool in February.

Judge Michael Porter said the juvenile involved in the incident was out of the range of the basic description of a child of tender years.

Porter also referred to a psychiatric examination which showed Bower would probably never repeat the offence. Defence counsel said the pressures of producing a six-day-a-week newspaper could have been a factor leading to the offence.

The 18-month suspended sentence is accompanied by an order from Judge Porter that Bower continue to receive psychiatric counselling.

ESSO ECONOBLUE: THE NEW LITTLE FURNACE THAT CAN SAVE A LOT OF FUEL.

The new Esso Econoblue takes up only 3½ square feet of floor space. Yet it is designed for maximum fuel economy.

This oil-fired, forced air system uses a better mixture of air and oil vapour for more complete combustion. And because the mixture is also recycled, you get more heat out of every drop of oil.

If your old furnace works at 66% efficiency, for example, Econoblue could reduce oil consumption by 20%. This means if you now use 750 gallons of fuel a year, Econoblue could save you 150 gallons.

So, if your furnace has been showing signs of age lately, don't wait until it gives up altogether.

Call Esso Home Comfort. The sooner you do, the sooner you'll start saving fuel.

Crash Report Lauded, Hit

VANCOUVER (CP) — There are deficiencies in Canada's air traffic control systems, rescue and firefighting services and in the certification of aircraft, the president of Canadian Air line Pilots Association said Friday.

Captain Roland Cook was commenting on a Transport Canada report on the Feb. 11, 1978, crash of a Pacific Western Airlines jet at Cranbrook.

Cook said in a telegram from association headquarters in Brampton, Ont., that the problems will remain if Transport Canada continues to cut costs by reducing employees' hours and the manning of control towers and pursuing "questionable priorities in allocating funds."

Forty-two persons were killed when a Boeing 737 crashed at the southeastern British Columbia community's airport on a flight from Calgary and another person died later of injuries.

The report, released Thursday, said the pilots lost control of the jet when a thrust reverser on the plane's left engine deployed as it tried to gain altitude after an aborted landing attempt.

The report also said that the estimated time of arrival at the airport was considerably in error resulting in a traffic conflict between the arriving aircraft and a snow sweeper working on the runway.

Cook said the association is satisfied generally with the investigation's findings, and is encouraged to see that department officials acknowledged inadequacies in regulations relating to the cause of the accident.

But he said his organization will continue to press for an independent body to investigate accidents and improve aviation safety.

The report criticizes the design and regulations governing the United States manufactured thrust reverser which "did not adequately provide for the possibility of an aborted landed after touchdown and thrust reverser initiation."

It also noted rescue efforts at the scene were hampered because of a lack of firefighting vehicles able to get through deep snow and lack of trained rescue personnel.

Meanwhile in Edmonton, alawyer for PWA said Thursday he disagrees with a federal bureau's finding that the PWA crew involved in the crash "did not report" its estimated time of arrival during its final approach to Cranbrook airport.

"There is a radio tape that's not very nice and clear, which the government will have to produce in court eventually," said Eric Lane of Toronto.

"I have heard it several times, and I believe there may well have been an attempt (by the flight crew) to communicate with Cranbrook just before the landing — but it's a question the court will have to decide."

Minister Jailed For UIC Fraud

KELOWNA (CP) — A Lutheran minister was sentenced Friday to 63 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to 14 charges of fraudulently obtaining $1,648 in unemployment insurance payments.

Court was told that Richard Edward Klein, 28, became unemployed after leaving a ministerial position in Castlegar. He then moved here where he obtained UIC benefits while working as a laborer late last year and early this year.

When UIC officials interviewed Klein in January, he told them that he did not have a job.

Provincial Court Judge G. S. Denroche said the accused had been in a position of trust and so would be dealt with more harshly than usual.

Burne-Jones Panels Bring $300,000

VANCOUVER (UPC) — A series of four panels painted by Edward Burne-Jones were sold for a record $300,000 in Vancouver recently, a Macmillan and Perrin Gallery spokesman said Friday.

Each of the four panels completed as a set in 1868 portrays an almost lifesize portrait, each one representing one of the four seasons. Burne-Jones is considered a major pre-Raphelite painter of the 19th century, MacMillan said.

Prince Rupert Workers Return

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — About 250 shoreworkers returned to their jobs Friday at two Canadian Fishing Company processing plants in this north coast city after a two-day walkout to protest a loss of grading jobs.

The B.C. Labor Relations Board granted the company a cease-and-desist order against the pickets Thursday night.

The workers said about 30 grading jobs were lost at the plants because the company agreed to sell ungraded herring roe to a Japanese buyer. A company spokesman said six to 10 jobs were affected.

B.C. Socreds to Plot Strategy

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The B.C. executive of the federal Social Credit Party will meet here next Saturday to plan the party's provincial campaign for the May 22 federal election. The meeting will take place at the same time as the provincial Social Credit two-day convention here Friday and Saturday.

Welfare Fraud Jails Woman

VANCOUVER (CP) — A city woman whose precedent-setting aquittal on soliciting charges has hampered police action against prostitutes, was jailed Friday for welfare fraud.

County Court Judge W. A. McClellan sentenced Deborah Hutt, 28, to six months in jail for fraudulently obtaining $3,700 in welfare.

Judge McClellan said Hutt obviously was not a welfare case because she used the money to pay her tuition at a fashion school. She received the funds from August, 1976, and April, 1977.

Hutt has since repaid $1,800. Judge McClellan ordered her to repay the balance.

In a Supreme Court of Canada decision last year, Hutt was acquitted on a charge of soliciting because the court ruled that soliciting must be persistent.

Premier Flays Foes Of Throne Speech

Debate on the speech from the throne wound up Friday with Premier Bill Bennett delivering a free-wheeling and boisterous speech attacking the opposition.

He said a vote against the throne speech would be a vote against dental care, a bill of rights, equity in the purchase of automobile insurance and expanded home-ownership programs.

The vote was 28 to 14 in favor with Tory leader Vic Stephens voting with the NDP.

Bennett said much of the revenue for his government's social programs, such as extended health care and personal home care, was from the $700 million collected from resources.

This, he said, is up from the $400 million collected during the last year of the previous NDP government.

The premier said the throne speech outlined his government's legislative thrust and the Social Credit party's philosophy.

He said the government had promised a bill of rights "because we feel the people should, through legislation, receive a guarantee of their fundamental rights."

Bennett said the NDP had not presented such legislation because "they didn't have the will because their philosophy of big government control felt those rights might get in their way some day when they wanted to take over a little more, and a little more and a little more from the people of this province."

He accused the NDP of defending existing expropriation legislation and said legislative changes proposed in this field would provide greater fairness, greater equity and compensation and above all protect the rights of citizens of the province.

MLA Calls For Probe

Port Alberni NDP MLA Bob Skelly presented a petition to the legislature Friday calling for a public inquiry into the West Coast fishing industry.

The petition, with 250 signatures, states that the salmon and herring resources of the Pacific coast may be endangered by the incompetent management of the federal department of fisheries.

It said that the economy of a number of coastal communities may be threatened by a policy that concentrates the harvest of the sea in a few hands.

Roe Fishermen Got Rich

The most lucrative herring roe season ever for B.C. fishermen ended Friday.

It closed with a strong possibility that Canadian processing companies will lose millions of dollars to Japanese buyers, a Fisheries Canada spokesman said.

Regional coordinator Bob Humphreys said west coast fishermen earned about $128 million in the month-long season on a small catch of 42,000 tons.

"Last year, they thought a catch of 70,000 tons and a pay-off of $56 million was fantastic," Humphreys said.

Processing companies which shuck the fish and process the roe, primarily for Japanese markets, paid between $2,000 and $3,000 a ton for the raw herring, far above last year's rates.

"The fishermen negotiated a $1,200 rate for gillnet herring, but the first boat which came in got $1,900 a ton, and from there it went up," Humphreys said. "The catch was smaller than expected and the prices just went up."

By the end of a fishing season, Japanese importers normally have negotiated a purchase price with fish processors. But, Canadian processors who paid the record prices to the fishermen were having a hard time persuading the Japanese wholsesalers to pay higher prices.

The Japanese say, their market cannot afford the price Canadian companies need to make a profit. Roe is considered a delicacy in Japan where it sold last year for between $56 and $60 a kilo (2.2 pounds).

"If they buy it at all who knows what they would have to charge now? Maybe $100 a kilo," said Humphreys. "Canadian companies may have to sell at a break-even price, or lose their shirts."

Japanese companies have been trying to break the Canadian companies' stranglehold on supply by buying into local processors and paying any price required to get the fish for those companies. "That's what's driving the price up," Humphreys said.

Ex-SC Minister On Rail Junket With Barrett

Premier Bill Bennett said Friday he is neither surprised nor concerned that a former Social Credit cabinet minister has joined NDP leader Dave Barrett's campaign for a northern rail link.

Barrett leaves Monday for Juneau, Alaska, where he will promote his proposal which would link Alaska to Washington via Yukon and B.C. He is to address a special joint session of the Alaska state senate and house of representatives.

Ralph Loffmark, a minister in the W.A.C. Bennett government for eight years, said Friday he supports Barrett's proposal.

Bennett said Loffmark is a private citizen who has not been active in Social Credit party affairs for years.

Loffmark now is a professor of business and commerce at the University of B.C.

Bennett described the trip as Barrett's "version of the Joe Clark tour."

"He's going travelling except that his problem is that he's going to fall on his own bayonet," he told the legislature, a reference to Clark's accident with a color guard during his recent world trip.

Before The Judge

An 18-year-old Ontario youth was given a 30-day jail sentence in Victoria provincial court Friday for having a stolen suitcase in his possession.

Thomas Grant Kevin Barry Moore, of Stoney Creek, pleaded guilty.

The suitcase was taken from a locker at 865 View on March 22 and found by police in Moore's room at the Century Inn.

Moore was convicted twice last year of the same offence and was given suspended sentences and one-year probations in April and August.

Marvin Palmer Lamont, 37, of no fixed address, was charged with auto theft, possession of stolen property and dangerous driving in connection with an incident earlier Friday and was remanded in custody until Tuesday for election of trial method and possible bail hearing.

Victoria city police arrested a man after a vehicle reported stolen moments earlier, struck a pole after going through the Johnston Street Bridge and flipped three times.

A 43-year-old Saanich man, Ronald Joseph Northup, of 3023 Tillicum, was also remanded in custody until Wednesday for election and bail hearing.

Northup was charged with possession of four chain saws stolen during a Sunday break-in at Alf Becker and Son, 2981 Tillicum.

A one-day sentence and 75 hours of community service work were given a 27-year-old mother of three who pleaded guilty to passing two worthless cheques in Alberta.

Sheryl Ann Bedea, of 1934 Maple, pleaded guilty to two counts of false pretences.

The court was told the woman was convicted of 20 counts of the same offence Jan. 31, 1972, in Calgary and was given a suspended sentence and two years' probation.

John Pennington of The Law Centre told the court the woman was receiving unemployment insurance benefits and was also on welfare.

She was placed on eight months' probation and also ordered to make restitution for both cheques.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: David James Eplen, 31, of Port Hardy, $275; and Ann Preston, 50, of 2373 Zela, $200.

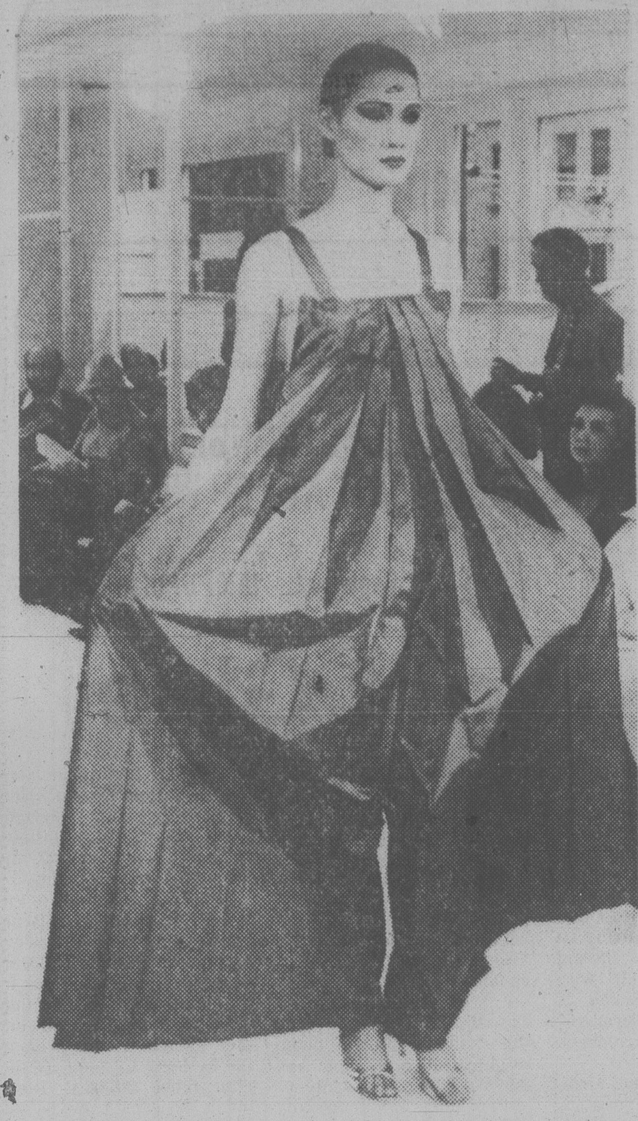
'Clothes Beyond Fashion Trend'



Taffeta overalls are slashed down the sides

New Route To Elegance

By BERNADINE MORRIS

NEW YORK — Frederick Zlotkin, cellist, played Bach as background music. If nothing else, that was a sign that no ordinary fashion show was taking place on the second floor of 860 Madison Avenue, near 70th Street.

The entire place was painted pristine white, including the first-floor entrance, which bore the name Moss in gold letters. Automobile headlights formed the track lights that illuminated the runway.

Before the show, a small figure in black corduroy pants with a black silk scarf tied around the neck of his black sweater, moved around nervously.

"A year ago, I had never heard of Calvin Klein," he said. At 33, Ronaldus Shamask has worked as a display man, fashion illustrator, painter and theatre designer. Born in Amsterdam, he lived in Melbourne, Australia, and London before coming to New York in 1971. A year ago, he began discussing opening a fashion shop with Murray Moss, who became his partner. By August, he had started work.

"I wanted to make clothes that were beyond fashion trends, that were perfect, like a diamond," he said.

He invented his own techniques as he went along, borrowing freely from the Japanese. He made life-size drawings to serve as guidelines.

The dresses are made of narrow pieces of fabric, sewn together, the seams forming the only decoration. Occasionally they are paralleled by rows of fagoting. Jackets tend to be square, softened by fluttery capelike extensions on the shoulder.

His fabrics are crisp linen, silk taffeta, pique. His hemlines tend to fall in the vicinity of the ankle. His pants are pleated, his effects linear.

"It's a new approach to elegance," commented Stella Blum, curator of costumes at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. "I love the clean lines and the purity. The clothes are classical in a new sense."

The collection is the product of a unique vision, though nothing looks strange or unsettling. They're priced from $200 to $3,000 in the shop on Madison Avenue.

Past and Future Finally Wed

MILAN (AP) — The happy fashion news out of Milan is the long-awaited marriage of past and future, of supersonic frenzy and ocean liner nostalgia.

Since the Italian fall-winter 1979 ready-to-wear collections opened last week, disco beats and revival tunes, geometric lines and soft curves, pale pastels and garish neon colors have walked arm in arm down the catwalk.

The more than 1,000 buyers, mostly from the United States, Japan and West Germany who have converged on Milan to make their fashion bids, had until the end of the show to decide whether the marriage has been successful.

Best so far at this mixed marriage was Gianni Versace for Callaghan, with his eye-opening collection. It featured accentuated shoulders and tight waists, plastic cummerbunds and futuristic hair combs, the glitter and gleam of sequins and spangles which combined to create a space-age atmosphere, whereas the soft colors and flowing lines of silk jersey and organza with matching corsage roses pinned at the waist or shoulder blend to evoke a forgotten Atlantic crossing on the defunct Raffaello.

For Versace, daytime is all a matter of co-ordination. He revives the twinset in mohair or cashmere, matches linings of jackets with the color of pants or skirts, and outfits the rainy day working girl from head to toe, with uni-color umbrella, Mackintosh hat, suede oxfords and cire raincoat. Even the dress underneath co-ordinates.

Since man has been dressing, leather has been an important part of his wardrobe, and Versace uses it day and night alike. For daytime he combines it with tweeds and jerseys. For nighttime it becomes the bodice of a light organza gown. A series of slinky black kid pantsuits unite the deliquent look of a past waterfront with a future space-suit toughie.

Top billing at the Versace collection goes to a series of bold white fox fur belts, which will certainly play Satan to the conscience of the ecology-minded woman. In fact, the fox looks so good in his new snow-white skin complete with many tails and one beady-eyed face used as a clasp, that it will take all his cleverness to keep his body off the racks.

The Versace color news is in the ice shades of his organza evening wear, reminiscent of the 19th century English sugar mints but also a slick possibility for a future space ship cocktail lounge.

Walter Albini also coupled past town and country style, complete with Sherlock Holmes knitted jackets, pleated plaid skirts, and brown oxfords for daytime, with astral quilted velvet sequined mandarine jackets for day and night alike.

Accessory novelties for Albini are the trompe d'oiel, or illusion, T-shirts, where everything from a bow tie to jewels forming a necklace combine to look like the real thing, and the pin on bud vase, made of fake emerald leaves and designed to hold a real flower.

Gal Soldiers Wear Earrings

BRUSSELS (AP) — The Belgian army says some of its female soldiers are being negligent in their appearance, and officers have been told to correct the problem, the newspaper Libre Belgique reports. The newspaper said the army command is concerned about unauthorized wearing of earrings and other jewelry, excessive makeup, skirts above the knees and non-regulation hairdos and shoes.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Keep these dates at the Art Gallery . . .

For anyone who does needlework . . . or appreciates beauty in this very real art form . . . two exciting events will be taking place in April at the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, under the aegis of The Gallery Shop . . . The first of these is a sale of Mini-Kits on April 7 and 8 . . . Two days only, during which kits comprising beautiful modern designs of South African flowers, along with a color photo and color-coded wools . . . will be sold at about 25% less than the average kit! . . . Just 15 designs personally selected in England by Peggy Bartholomew, who is responsible for hand-picking the wools, selecting the colors and numbering the designs . . . Only one dozen kits in each design where prices will range from under $10 to $25 . . . which just covers the cost of pattern, wool and a small service charge for putting it all together! . . . These mini-kits are ideal for women who are novices, or are hesitant about tackling a piece of embroidery . . . They may be worked in either crewel or needlepoint . . . and you can't go wrong because it's all done by numbers! . . . Complete work and original water color sketches will also be on display during these two days . . . The second event is on April 21-22 . . . A small showing of exceptional modern embroideries done during the past two years . . . and two handsome larger pieces from the past . . . An outstanding show, so don't miss it! . . . The Gallery Shop, Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, 1040 Moss St., 384-7012

A Shot of magic color . . .

We saw blouses at Gibson's this week guaranteed to make any woman drool with sheer delight! . . . From the subdued tone-on-tone look of autumn and winter dressing . . . a noted blouse-maker has now burst forth with magic jewel-tones in pure silk . . . It's a real shot of magic color to accent this season's new suit . . . or give a brand new look to last year's outfit! . . . These gorgeous silk blouses are in brilliant royal blue, emerald green, heliotrope and turquoise . . . Some have Mandarin necks, others tiny collars, with deep back yokes and pleats . . . All have the flat breast pockets which are so new this spring . . . Another striking blouse is polka-dotted with tones going into pink and orchid . . . Prices are quite good . . . you'll get change from $100! . . . If a beautiful white blouse is your dream . . . Gibson's are prepared to make it come true with a lovely tone-on-tone white pure silk with tucked Mandarin collar and tucked cuff . . . a truly outstanding blouse! . . . Still on the subject of pure silk, Gibson's have just received two charming dresses from the same maker as the blouses . . . One is a print . . . brick with a tiny flower . . . styled with a small lapelled collar, simple sleeve and straight skirt . . . The other is cream with brown polka dots . . . Mandarin collar, straight skirt with slits . . . and once again, those new pockets! . . . Gibson's, 708 View St., 384-5913.

Distinguished ultrasuedes at Charmante's . . .

The new spring color in ultrasuede . . . as interpreted by Brodkin . . . is "Pistache" . . . the softest green ever! Charmante's have it in suits . . . one with a new short version of the Chanel jacket with top stitching and interesting shoulder line . . . and a lovely skirt with wide, top-stitched waistband, self belt and button front . . . Size 10 . . . Another suit in the same color . . . a size 8 . . . has a short fitted blazer jacket and a skirt with button front and side pockets . . . To wear beautifully with either of these is a matching blouse in a shadow stripe with flattering tie neckline . . . This same blouse would look great with other items in your wardrobe, too! . . . During this same visit to Charmante's we saw an attractive group by Irving Samuel in navy ultrasuede . . . A smashing double-breasted blazer in the latest style with straight back from a gathered yoke . . . Wrap skirt . . . And a skirt and vest with a different look . . . A flattering skirt with slight gathering at the yoked top, and vest with a drawstring waist . . . All these are lined and are washable . . . Also in navy, and lined, are ultrasuede coats by Sterling . . . Very good-looking, practical and versatile . . . Well worth their $500 price tag, in our book! . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

Summer sandals with that continental look . . .

We really thought we'd seen just about every style of sandal extant . . . but Munday's have a new group of Rapisardi sandals from Italy which are very different and intriguing! . . . Rapisardi, we learned, make nothing BUT sandals so they've got it down to a fine art! . . . Mostly slides and thongs, their sandals are more constructed this year . . . Made on leather insoles and rubber or composition outersoles so they're very flexible . . . There's a closed slide on a high wooden wedge with synthetic sole . . . Bone calf, with a very chic, continental look . . . Another interesting sandal is on a high cork wedge with cork insole and natural string treatment on the vamp . . . This same string vamp is also used on a lower wedge with rubber bottom . . . There's a young-looking thong on a lower wedge with a sling at the back (which is unusual in a thong), in deep brown leather . . . A straight thong with rubber sole and insole, has softly padded vamp, in white or beige . . . Finally, a fisherman's sandal in camel calf . . . Open lattice work vamp, wooden heel and rubber sole . . . All these sandals are available in AA and B widths . . . and range in price from $32 to $46 at . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Pure silks from Salvador of London . . .

We really felt we'd hit the Big Time when we visited Eaton's Signature Shop last Monday and were shown some very special . . . and very expensive . . . new imports from Salvador of London! . . . There are four outfits which literally took our breath away . . . all of them in pure silk whose mere "feel" is the epitome of luxury! . . . A ravishing dinner dress in creamy silk has a sort of lingerie look with its scalloped edging, narrow straps and embroidered top . . . A jacket matches this, with the scalloped edging, fine detailing . . . embroidered butterflies . . . which you'll even find on the sleeves . . . and separate sash . . . Price tag reads $725 . . . Next a silk day dress . . . white with moss green and burgundy windowpane checks . . . with stand-up collar and soft tie . . . A burgundy suede belt and burgundy linen blazer completes the outfit, whose price is $645 . . . The same fabrics and colors have been used in a two-piece ensemble with fairly straight skirt slightly gathered at the waist, and a Chanel jacket . . . $715 . . . There's a lovely silk crepe de chine ankle-length dinner dress with narrow shoulder straps, full bias cut skirt and burgundy silk jacket with yoke and padded shoulders, burgundy silk sash . . . $655 . . . Have a look, too, at the mercerized cotton T-shirts with various sequin motifs . . . $60 to $110 . . . and great for disco-going! . . . Eaton's Signature Shop, 382-7141, loc. 242.

Marvelous swimwear at this super boutique! . . .

Have you visited Dion's Boutique on Oak Bay Ave. yet? . . . It's just the most delightful shop you could hope to see! Of course you know that Dion's used to be in Hillside Shopping Centre and this new store is simply a re-location . . . Anyway, it's full of marvellous new things for you to browse among in a quiet, intimate atmosphere . . . Dion's are now going in for swimwear in a big way . . . They've got some terrific suits by Gottex of Israel which make a poor figure look good and a good one sensational! . . . Gorgeous prints and fantastic construction . . . which includes an inner girdle! . . . Sea Queen suits are great too . . . Many of them have the little all-around skirt which so many women prefer . . . And for the younger gals there are maillots and two-piece suits which are head-turning . . . Cover-ups aplenty too! . . . Dion's are now carrying Edith Strauss evening gowns . . . One is a very elegant polyester jersey with attached capelet . . . light grey trimmed with a darker shade . . . There's a claret-color Grecian-style dress with all-over pleating . . . narrow straps and a big shawl to fall gently from the shoulders . . . A beautiful royal blue cocktail dress with a very lovely draped overlay . . . slenderizing as all getout! . . . Dion's Boutique, 2045 Oak Bay Ave., 595-5444.

Dresses you'll [illegible] wearing . . .

Let's tell things like they are and admit it. Last year's dresses were difficult to wear for anyone who wasn't tall and slender and fairly young . . . Which left a lot of us out! . . . So Roy Imports didn't buy a great number of dresses . . . but this year it's a different story. Styles are pretty and flattering and wearable . . . and Roy's are greeting spring with a big selection of lovely dresses . . . and what's more, you don't need to spend $200 or more . . . because we saw some very good-looking numbers for around $60 . . . Newly arrived are some beautiful Dejas . . . those Canadian-made dresses with such a wonderful fit . . . famous for the quality of their workmanship . . . There's a little beauty in pink on pink with fine detailing, even to the exquisite little flowerlets which tip the neckline ties . . . $180 for this one . . . We like the soft pumpkin polyester jersey shirtdress with ultrasuede trim which well justifies its $190 price tag . . . A delightful blue dress with fine pleats all over, including the sleeves, would be a lovely choice for a mother-of-the-bride . . . $240 . . . We might mention that Deja is exclusive to Roy's in Sidney . . . Other new dresses, with the Schrader Sport label, are youthful, sophisticated, and under $100 in price

There's a polka dotted model in navy, red or brown . . . A Racell dress in vanilla polyester knit with the smart Scandinavian look . . . Everything from Ladies' Pride at around $60, to Eva Fishers starting at $300 at . . . Roy Imports, 435 Simcoe St., 384-1932 and 9807 Third St., Sidney, 656-3522.

Copyright © 1979 POPULAR SCIENCE

Use the Right Glue

By A.J. HAND

When you glue two pieces of wood together with one of today's modern adhesives, the joint should be stronger than the wood itself. If it isn't, you probably did something wrong. While gluing is a simple enough job, it does require attention to details. If you cut corners, you are courting failure.

First step is to make sure the surfaces being glued should match perfectly, with no gaps or spaces. The surfaces should be smooth, too.

Once it was thought that roughening the mating surfaces with coarse sandpaper would improve adhesion. Tests have since proven otherwise. Roughness interferes with a good fit and decreases strength in wood-to-wood joints. It is still a good idea, however, when you are gluing non-porous materials such as metals.

If you can't achieve a good fit between the parts, use epoxy glue. It is the best glue there is for filling gaps and providing maximum strength in sloppy joints. Note also that the slow-setting epoxies are stronger than the "five-minute" types.

Next, make sure the mating surfaces are clean and dry. If you are repairing an old joint, remove all the old glue. Soak the glue with warm water and scrub. If that doesn't work, scrape or chip it away. Then recheck for a good fit.

Use the right glue. Ordinary white glue such as Elmer's is fine for joints that won't be exposed to moisture. Yellow glues are even better. They grab more quickly and give better strength. For joints that will be exposed to water, use epoxy or resorcinol.

Make sure the glue you use is fresh. Epoxies and resorcinols usually can stand a long time on your shelf without going bad, but white and yellow glues can degrade in a year or so.

Don't use any glue that has jellied or become lumpy. If you use a two-part glue such as resorcinol or epoxy, follow the mixing instructions carefully. Improper proportions and insufficient mixing can prevent these glues from setting.

Always use glues at the correct temperature. Most will not set properly if used below room temperature. You can speed the setting of epoxies by applying moderate heat from a lamp or radiator. But don't overdo this or the wood being glued might shrink and crack. And don't use heat on white or yellow glues. It will actually soften them.

Apply glue to both surfaces and spread it around to get complete coverage. If you are gluing end grain, apply a prime coat of glue, let it set for about five minutes, then recoat. End grain soaks up glue so effectively that it sometimes drains the joint dry. Priming solves that problem.

Finally, assemble the parts and clamp them firmly. Do not, however, overtighten the clamps. This can squeeze all the glue out of the joint. Use just enough pressure to assure good contact. Then leave things alone for at least as long as the glue label advises. Don't touch the repair. Resist the temptation to unclamp too soon, and don't "test" the joint. Testing a joint before it is set can weaken it, even though the joint survives the test.

Washing Blues Out of Monday

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Many people are depressed on Mondays — the first day of the work week, says University of Iowa counsellor Carol Loganbill. She says that careful planning can help put the color back into blue Mondays. She recommends that if possible, dull jobs should be left until mid-week, that workers make an effort to look their best and that they make special plans for activities off the job — going out to lunch or to a movie.

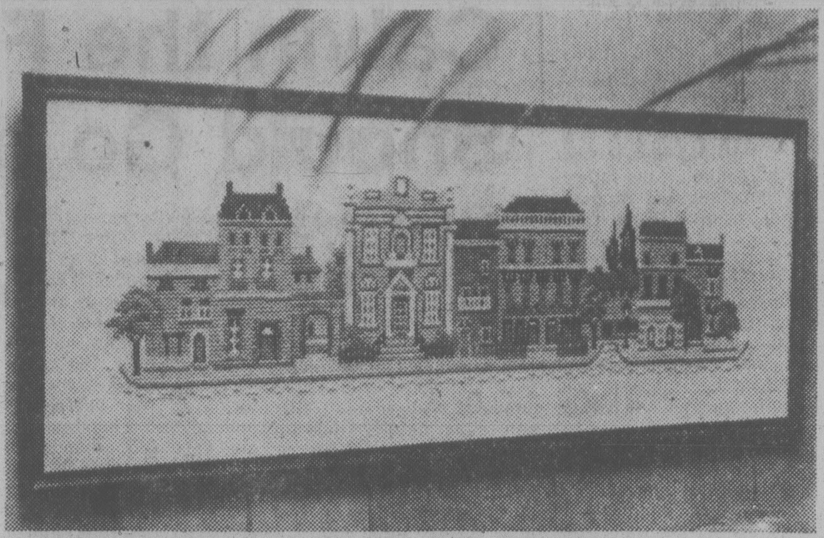
KNIT AND CHAT

Touch of Royalty In Fine Needlework



I expect there are many of you who have heard of The Royal School of Needlework, founded in 1872 by H.R.H. Princess Christian, daughter of Queen Victoria, for the object of "restoring ornamental needlework to the high place it once held in the decorative arts."

There were departments devoted to such techniques as gold work, ceremonial embroidery and the restoration of old embroideries and tapestries. In addition there was a section which specialized in the execution of crewel embroidery from designs supplied by William Morris, Edward Burne Jones and Walter Crane.

There was also a studio where pupils were instructed in drawing by the noted Lord Leighton, then president of the Royal Academy. The studio executed special commissions and provided designs for sale in the school's shop, a system which has continued to the present.

Over the years much outstanding embroidery has been undertaken by the school's workroom, including the Coronation Robes worn by Queen Elizabeth the Queen Mother in 1937 and Queen Elizabeth at her Coronation in 1953.

Today two of the most important roles of the school are teaching and restoration. Tapestries and wall hangings from Blenheim Palace were being repaired the day I was visiting. Several girls were working on an heraldic design for a French Count, as well as other contemporary commissions. The old embroideries and lace which are restored ensures their survival as part of the nation's artistic heritage.

Until 1946 the school was on Exhibition Road. It has been on 25 Princes Gate, London, S.W. 7 since that date. Apart from its regular two-year courses, there is an apprenticeship scheme for young students, evening classes as well as private instruction to help amateur embroiderers become more proficient in the art of needlework.

David Lloyd, the principal, wished me to announce the shop is open to visitors from 9:30 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Monday to Friday. It is well worth an afternoon's visit should you find yourself in London during a vacation. Canvasses and needlework kits of famous pieces of embroidery and tapestry can be purchased as well as numerous books on every field of art needlework.

This week's pattern is a charming scene reminiscent of England in the Regency days. Counted cross-stitch on white or ecru evenweave embroidery fabric worked with Anchor Stranded Cotton will make this stately picture a focal point of any room, drawing attention to its quiet dignified charm!

DEAR READERS: Recently I printed my Ten Commandments for Husbands. Being a proponent of equal rights, today I offer my Ten Commandments for Wives.

10 COMMANDMENTS FOR WIVES

1) Defile not thy body either with excessive foods, tobacco or alcohol, that thy days may be long in the house which thy husband provideth for thee.

2) Put they husband before thy mother, thy father, thy daughter and thy son, for he is thy lifelong companion.

3) Thou shalt not nag.

4) Permit no one to tell thee that thou art having a hard time of it; neither thy mother, thy sister nor thy neighbor, for the Judge will not hold her guiltless who letteth another disparage her husband.

5) Thou shalt not withhold affection from thy husband for every man loveth to be loved.

6) Forget not the virtue of cleanliness and modest attire.

7) Forgive with grace, for who among us doth not need forgiveness?

8) Remember that the frank approval of thy husband is worth more to thee than the admiring glances of a hundred strangers.

9) Keep thy home in good order, for out of it cometh the joy of thine old-age.

10) Honor the Lord thy God all the days of thy life, and thy children will rise up and call thee blessed.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 14-year-old girl who is pretty good at solving problems, but I need help with this one.

Last Friday night my parents came home and found my boyfriend and me lying on the couch with the lights turned off. We were just talking. Honest to God. I swear it!

They made a big fuss and my boyfriend went home early. (He's allowed to stay until midnight on weekends, but he was so embarrassed by the way they yelled at me he left at 11 o'clock.)

Do you see anything wrong with two people lying on the couch and talking?

What would you do if it were your daughter, and you had always been able to trust her?

JUST TALKING

DEAR JUST: I'd tell her that she'd be wise to keep both feet on the floor, and so would her boyfriend — that talking in a sleeping position could lead to nightmares she never dreamed could happen.

I'd say, "I still trust you, Honey, but people think much better with the lights on — sitting up."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "A FAILURE AT 18": A "failure"? No Way!

Norman Lear (a success by anybody's standards) said at the Emmy Awards: "It is not true that you must be No. 1 — or in the top 10 — or you haven't made it at all. Young people need to know that there is sufficient reward in life for succeeding simply at the level of doing one's best.

"The truth is, you are not a failure if you don't make the top spot. Anyone may REACH for the brass ring, but only one may have it, so the joy of most of us is simply being on the carousel."

Thanks, Norman. Beautiful!

CITIES GROWING

NEW YORK (AP) — Two-thirds of the world's population will be living in cities by the early 21st century, say United Nations population experts. Mexico City will be the world's largest metropolis with more than 30 million inhabitants, the officials predicted in a recent report.

Playsuit Grows Up

NEW YORK (CP) — One-piece outfits with shorts, borrowing heavily on the design of childrens' playsuits, will be popular for summer, say leading New York fashion retailers. The outfits, in materials ranging from cottons, terrycloths and stretch fabrics, come with tube tops, '40s shoulders, nautical trims and backless halters.

Calvin the Fat Cat Should Go on Diet

POP CORN
CANDY
HOT DOGS

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: My sister says it's baby fat. My brother says he is just big-boned. In my opinion, Calvin, our cat, is downright fat. He's three years old, weighs 16 pounds and measures 22 inches around the stomach. Is there any test I can try on him to prove to everybody that he is overweight? And if he is, what kind of diet? He doesn't relate to green salads or cottage cheese, mind you. — L.E.

DEAR L.E.: You can take my word for it, your feline's fat. Unless in your own veterinarian's opinion there is a need for urgency, and there probaby isn't, the simplest solution to the fat problem is less food. If he is getting a good quality balanced diet now, simply cut back a bit on it. If he is getting junk food or even other snacks on the side, eliminate those. Changing a cat's diet is a difficult project. If the change is to something that has no taste appeal, it's generally impossible.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My boyfriend has in his basement a star-nosed mole as a pet. Why would anyone want one? Nobody ever sees it hardly. I've only seen it once in many, many visits, and you've got to feed it tons of earthworms. Really, why would someone want a pet you can't even pet? He says, "It's great," but why? — B.D.

DEAR B.D.: While pets needn't be pettable (i.e.: few fish are) to prove enjoyable, the most important pets certainly are living and responsive. Some people want to keep an animal simply for its curiosity or conversational value. Others form a real attachment to an unresponsive pet. Usually, though, appeal lags after a while and the poor animal involved becomes increasingly neglected. For every such "pet" properly cared for, as is your boyfriend's mole, there's a hundred who are neglected, abandoned, or who simply succumb. This lack of love and respect for life is sad, indeed, be the caretaker a careless child or a callous adult.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Why do you suppose my cockatiel is all swelled up over one eye? Don't tell me he ran into a door because he never gets out of his cage. — A.D.

DEAR A.D.: The most common cause for a swelling in that area is an inflammed sinus filled with infected material. Your poor bird probably has a sinus headache. In any event, professional treatment is certainly indicated.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Every time I turn around these days, I find another article on stress. The last one was on stress in older people. It made me wonder about my geriatric group here consisting of a dog and two cats, all in their second decade. They all have hard times occasionally, or think they do. What does stress do to them? — E.B.

DEAR E.B.: A minute amount of stress actually helps keep your past-prime pets perking by preventing life from becoming too boring.

In larger doses, stress can significantly alter their ability to cope and hence survive.

With age and/or a series of diseases or stressful events which have occurred in the past, reserves in vital body organs such as heart, liver and kidneys keep dropping. Such an animal is obviusly aging yet may not appear (or be) critically ill. Eventually, the reserve in one or more vital organs may become razor thin so that, for example, the kidneys are working at full capacity simply to keep the animal going. At this point, any additional significant stress from chilling, to strenuous exercise, to a new but seemingly minor illness could trigger collapse of over-worked organs and hence the entire body.

The healthier the animal in all aspects, the less significant is stress, but for the older animal which may be tenaciously walking a tightrope of survival, even seemingly minor stress may be beyond its coping capabilities.

Legs in Limelight

NEW YORK (CP) — As hem lines rise this fall, more attention will be paid to hosiery, says designer Hubert de Givenchy. He says that pantyhose will be available in more textures and in new colors — including deep purples and reds. Fall fashions will stress a slender silhouette, so boots will be on their way out and shoes, in sporty and classic lines, will continue the line of the narrow clothes, he says.

His Diet Ends After Work

My husband is on a constant diet — that is, until he gets home. When he comes in from work he's famished. Not only does he overeat, but he eats so rapidly that he balloons up. Then, when he lies down or goes to bed, he belches enormous quantities of gas. Do you think there could be something wrong with him other than just overeating? — Mrs. A.N.H.

DEAR MRS. H.:

You probably have pinpointed the reason for your husband's discomfort. The diet that excludes breakfast and lunch must have its pitfalls. One of them necessarily is the uncontrolled eating at dinner.

A much more sensible approach to dieting, of course, is to eat a moderate breakfast and lunch. Then there will not be the intense hunger pangs that make it necessary to wolf down an enormous dinner.

Almost all people swallow small quantities of air while eating or drinking. This is known as "aerophagia." Some people swallow abnormal amounts of air, especially when they eat hurriedly and talk while eating. This can account for excessive belching, particularly when the person is in an erect position.

When people lie down after a heavy meal, the air in the stomach becomes trapped, causing a feeling of bloat and discomfort.

This may be the answer in some instances to the symptoms you describe. Yet, there may be any of a number of problems in the lower esophagus or in the stomach which should be ruled out as a possible cause. For example, the most common cause might be a hiatus hernia. This is a condition frequently found in overweight people past the age of 45. It can readily be diagnosed by X-ray studies of the sophagus and stomach.

Your husband should undergo such studies. If he does have a hiatus hernia, dietary discretion and medication can easily keep this problem under control.

I'm 14 years old. I broke my leg when I fell off my bike, now it's in a cast. When I'm all better will my leg be as good as it was before? I like sports. — Brian M.

DEAR BRIAN:

Once the bone knits it becomes just as firm and strong as it was before the injury.

You must be sure to listen to the advice of your doctor and parents and not do too much too quickly. Remember that when the bone was fractured, muscles and tendons were injured, too. They are not as strong as the bone, and sometimes it takes many more weeks for them to return to complete health.

Certainly, you should not worry about your ability to enjoy sports when once you have been given the green light to start playing again.

$99 Flights Planned

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — World Airways will start scheduled transcontinental flights between Newark, N.J., Baltimore, Los Angeles and Oakland on April 11 for a one-way fare of $99.99, the airline announced. The price, about one-half of the regular one-way economy fare, will be available for all seats on all flights without advance purchase requirement.

Public Pressure Urged on Nitrites

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A Queen's University professor has called for public pressure to force food companies to reduce the number of additives they put in their products.

Kanji Nakatsu, a pharmacologist, told 13 people at a public meeting there is a risk of develping cancer from eating even small amounts of nitrosamines.

Nitrite is the chemical used by the food inustry to color, flavor and preserve such meats as bacon, ham, wieners, sausage, salami and pepperoni.

Nakatsu told the meeting that food companies are not likely to reduce the number of additives voluntarily because it would cost money. And he said politicans aren't likely to take action because food companies pay a large portion of election expenses.

Doses of Comfort For Kids in Hospital

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. (CP) — For most youngsters, a few days in a hospital bed can seem like an eternity of uniforms and needles, abandonment and rejection.

But at St. Michael's Hospital children's ward here volunteers and staff are injecting a little more fun and a lot more warmth into a child's hospital visit.

In a gaily decorated room down the corridor of the ward is a veritable mountain of entertainment for youngsters. A television set lets children keep up with the latest cartoons, toys and games help them occupy their time, and there even are two telephones for conversations across the room.

In the midst of toys and Dr. Seuss books, there's also a pair of warm arms ready for a hug and a comforting voice to sooth the children when it seems like mom and dad will never arrive for their daily visit.

Mary Stadnicki is one of those sources of emotional comfort.

In the hospital she is classified as a member of St. Michael's auxiliary pediatric committee. But to many children, she's another mom.

Miss Stadnicki, like other auxiliary volunteers, spends about two afternoons a week in the children's ward, drying a few tears and cuddling despondent youngsters.

"We're concerned with the emotional well-being of a child in addition to his physical needs," she says.

"It can be a very traumatic experience for some youngsters. We're just here to ease their adjustment to the hospital."

Miss Stadnicki says some children feel deprived of their parents' contact, and when they have a chance they cling rather desperately to those around them.

"When a parent leaves, right away they reach out to you. But the next day, when the parent is back, they don't even know you."

The auxiliary's volunteer program began in the early 1960s, but in 1966 work in the pediatrics ward was assigned to student nurses.

With dissolution of the nursing program, care of the youngsters again was turned over to the auxiliary in 1973.

Miss Stadnicki, a former school teacher, finds the time she spends at the hospital a welcome change from her teaching days.

"I guess children have different needs. In school they need your intelligence, here they need your comfort. You could never touch a child in school."

Most of the volunteers deal with children who are in hospital for a short period of time, helping them conquer their fears and loneliness between parental visits.

Some children, however, are not lucky enough to see their parents on a regular basis.

Because of this, the hospital auxiliary has formed a special program called the Aunties to care for long-term patients abandoned by parents.

Gourmet Meals for Patients

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kamol Phutlek, La Terrasse's talented Thai chef, gulped when he walked into the huge kitchen at Einstein Medical Centre, Northern Division.

"So big," he said. "Hope it turns out all right."

Then he slipped into his white apron and began a creation of cream of cucumber soup, chicken crepes stuffed with mushrooms and splashed with mornay sauce, watercress-endive salad with vinaigrette dressing, poached pears in raspberry sauce.

The elegant meal, prepared by the hospital staff under Phutlek's watchful eye, was served on Wednesday to about 300 patients and 800 hospital employees, who agreed everything turned out just fine.

Gourmet meals are to be served monthly at Einstein, prepared under the supervision of other chefs from such well-known city restaurants as Le Bec Fin, Wildflowers, Frog and the Chestnut Hill Hotel.

"They're donating their names, their recipes, their chefs and their supervision," said Martin Goldsmith, the Einstein vice-president who came up with the idea. "We're the benefactors of a lot of good spirit."

Add a Touch of the 'Deep South'

GARDENING

jack beastall

The magnolia is usually associated with the "Deep South" but the magnificent display beng enjoyed by local residents shows them to be quite at home in the coastal regions of southwestern British Columbia.

Although named as an honor to Pierre Magnol, a professor of medicine and botany, in the 16th century the magnolia was not introduced into cultivation until some one hundred years later.

Before dealing with the separate species and varieties which succeed here it may be best to outline their cultural requirements.

Soil preparation is probably the main factor, and during the years that follow they must be regularly mulched and given some fertilizer as the blossoms fade.

Generally speaking, the ideal soil for magnolias is called a good medium loam with reasonable drainage. The home gardener can make this type of soil by adding rotted leafmould and the coarse grind peat moss to either light or heavy soil. Well rotted compost, very old manure, or mushroom compost, can be substituted for the leafmould.

In the case of light soil, the humus will add body and increase the water holding capacity, while in a heavy soil it will loosen the clay, hold it open, and permit air to enter more freely.

Nearly all magnolias have roots that are thick and fleshy; this is the guide to how they should be handled and planted.

Any fleshy-type root system is touchy about being disturbed or moved, even young plants, because fleshy roots are very slow to repair damage and replace losses. Therefore it is not wise to disturb such roots during the dormant season, the usual time for moving shrubs and trees.

Fortunately for the home gardener the practice of growing plants for sale in containers is common today.

Magnolias grown this way can be transferred to the garden at any time except during winter when the soil is cold and wet.

When the plants have to be lifted from the soil for moving to another location the best time is early in September while the heat of summer is still in the soil, or second best, in late spring just as growth commences. At these periods the rooting system will quickly re-establish itself and there is less chance of decay attacking the roots that have been damaged.

As with all plants having fleshy roots, the rootball must not be exposed to sun and wind for even five minutes. Keep the rootball damp and covered with wet sacking until it is snugly back in the soil. If the soil is dry, see that the roots are well watered-in.

When the plant is set, apply a shallow mulch of compost, rotted manure or mushroom compost to prevent rapid drying-out of the soil.

Never set the plant any deeper in the soil than it was originally. Magnolias are surface rooting (hence the need for a protective mulch) and care must be taken to firm the bottom of the planting hole so that no sinking of the soil can take place. Use a planting board across the top of the hole to obtain the correct height for the roots in relation to the surrounding soil.

Good soil preparation, careful planting, and care taken to see they do not suffer from lack of water during dry weather, especially during the first year, and you should have no difficulty in establishing a magnolia.

Most species, varieties, and hybrids are quite hardy as far as growth is concerned, but the early flowering kinds in particular are just as suseptible to flower damage from spring frosts as our camellias and early flowering rhododendrons, therefore need a little care in placing so the flower protection is assured.

The "Star Magnolia" from Japan, Magnolia stellata, makes a charming display with its small fragrant white flowers with strap-shaped petals, each with a faint flush of rosy-lilac at the base. many local gardens would be enhanced with this magnolia, and there are several other species to be found in local nurseries from time to time.

Those magnolias which flower as young plants are best suited to the home garden, for there are some which take 25 to 30 years before producing their first bloom.

Magnolia stellata has already been mentioned, and there are two more in this class, Magnolia soulangeana, a hybrid named after Soulange-Bodin, a French botanist, and the plants usually sold as Magnolia liiflora variety nigra, with larger blossoms and slightly deeper color on the outside.

Since these magnolias flower on bare branches, a background of some kind is a great advantage, especially conifers or evergreens shrubs.

Blooming time is from April, extending in the case of the hybrid soulangeanas, to near the end of May when the branches are in full leaf.

A number of readers have reported the flowering magnolias as "Tulip-trees". The tulip-tree is liriodendron tulipifera (tulip-like blossoms) which flowers much later in the season. Owners of magnolias which have been photogrphed for the press and for inclusion in travel folders, have made the error of calling th plants tulip-trees, much to the amusement of visitors from the eastern provinces where the Liriodendron is native.

Work for Week

As daffodils fade, nip off flower head with seedpod to prevent weakening of bulbs. In dry spell, water to keep leaves green through April and part of May, for this is important time for buiding bulbs for next year's display.

Brush lawn with stiff broom or rake over bare patches. Scatter more grass seed, cover with fine screened compost. Protect with wire or tree prunings if necessary to prevent birds taking all the seed.

In cool place indoors or in covered coldframe, sow a few seeds of early summer cabbage, early cauliflower; give good light, little water, and transplant soon as possible into separate small cans to grow on until planting outdoors by end of month if weather suitable.

Christmas Poinsettia should be entering its rest period of about four weeks before cutting down the stems to where dormant buds can be seen low on each stem. Then water again; repot in same pot but with fresh soil mixture and put into sunny warm window to grow new strong shoots. Don't put outdoors until June.

Care for all seedlings growing indoors; they need turning twice daily if in windows to prevent weakening of stems. Water only when needed to prevent wilting; give air without draught.

$3.60 an Hour To Guinea Pigs

Abugov, 27, sits in a glass booth, smoking and breathing in polluted air, to find out what his smoking habit is doing to his body. He says it's fun.

Otherwise unemployed, Abugov is one of thousands who volunteer yearly to be part of the University of Toronto's experiments and research projects. When real guinea-pigs won't do, the university turns to its students and the public for help.

"Curiosity is part of it, sure, but the money is an added incentive," said Abugov, who plans to attend college next year.

His total payment from the university will be $36 at the end of four sessions.

Dr. Sheldon Mintz, an associate director of the Gage Institute which is conducting the experiment, said volunteers are paid at the end to ensure they follow through.

Persons already in the projects may get an extra $5 for each volunteer they bring into the program.

Mintz said housewives and students are the best subjects because they have the spare time needed.

The Gage Institute, a former tuberculosis testing laboratory now part of the university, conducts dozens of research projects each year.

Abugov's project involves 80 persons being tested for effects of air pollution on smokers. The level of pollution being used is comparable with that already present in North American cities.

War Declared on Cocaine

By LOU CANNON

EL PASO, Texas (WP) — Flanked by armed marshals and wearing black execution-style hoods, the informers are led into the well-guarded federal courtroom here to tell grand juries lurid stories of drugs, money and late-night flights from Central America.

These hooded witnesses, who say they fear for their lives if their identities become known, are covert agents in an undeclared war now being waged in the southwest against what U.S. authorities say is a massive invasion of cocaine from south of the border.

Based on the anonymous testimony of these witnesses and that of more normally attired federal agents, the grand jury here has responded with a flood of indictments against purported big-time drug smugglers Grand juries in two other Texas cities and in Las Vegas and Seattle also have been pulled into the investigation, which has stretched from the steaming jungles of Colombia to the air-conditioned coolness of casinos on the Las Vegas Strip.

The central figure of the Texas investigations has been professional gambler Jimmy Chagra, a younger brother of flamboyant El Paso attorney Lee Chagra, who was shot to death in his offices last Dec. 23 in a robbery of more than $400.00. Last month, Jimmy Chagra, 34, was indicted in Midland, Texas, on five counts of smuggling massive amounts of cocaine and other drugs from Colombia into Texas, Colorado and Florida.

Even in high-rolling Las Vegas, Chagra is considered, in the parlance of the town, "a big player." At Caesars Palace, where he lived as a celebrated guest while his lavisn Las Vegas home was being built, Chagra is believed to be one of the biggest gamblers in the world. Undisputed testimony at his bail bond hearing showed that Caesars advanced Chagra more than $8 million during a four-year period from 1975 to 1979.

According to the testimony of one federal Drug Enforcement Agency investigator, Chagra gambled — and lost — $1.1 million at Ceasars in one three-day period early in February of this year.

These known losses are seen by federal investigators as a fraction of the financial cornucopia sustained by the South American cocaine trade. A federal agent at the bail hearing testified that Chagra's acknowledged high-stakes gambling is a cover for his real occupation of "illegally importing dangerous drugs and narcotics into the United States and distributing them."

Chargra is the No. 1 target in an industry allegedly so profitable that it is undiscouraged even by maximum sentences. In recent months law-enforcement agents have seized airplanes and boats loaded with sophisticated electronic gear and large quantities of narcotics.

"The profits are incredibly high — that's the mother's milk of this business," says San Antonio-based U.S. Attorney Jamie Boyd, who obtained the indictment against Chagra. "Because of this there has been a dramatic increase in the smuggling of controlled substances into the United States."

Federal authorities say that the financing for many large-scale drug importations comes from uper-middle-class businessmen and professional people who have extra money to invest. Such investments have long been open knowledge in El Paso, a drug-conscious town that is separated from the rest of the West by deserts and a mountain range but from Mexico only by a shallow river.

A month ago, an FBI agent in El Paso, O. Leon Dobbs, broke an unwritten rule that this "respectable" underwriting of criminal investment go unmentioned. Dobbs warned 70 members of the El Paso Downtown Kiwanis Club that businessmen who knew about illegal activities had six weeks to turn themselves in or face prosecution.

"There is an attitude problem among some rich persons in El Paso," Dobbs said in an subsequent interview. "Doctors, lawyers and businessmen invest money in crime. Then they pretend they don't know about the investment they've made in illegal drugs. And some get a 25 percent profit or more a week."

Local businessmen and the mayor complained about the speech and Dobbs was reportedly ordered by his superiors to stop giving ultimatums or newspaper interviews but there is a general belief in El Paso that his warning has made potential investors more wary.

According to testimony in the bail hearing, Jimmy Chagra carried such large amounts of cash that he kept more than $900,000 in a footlocker in his Caesars Palace suite. At Caesars, Chagra was known as a lavish tipper who once gave $60,000 to a craps-dealer crew during a winning streak.

Lee Chagra, a popular attorney who was the target of an unsuccessful federal drug smuggling indictment in 1973, had before his death been preparing a lawsuit charging the DEA and a tough-talking deputy U.S. attorney named James Kerr with a "federal conspiracy" against him. Kerr, himself the target of an assassination attempt last November, and U.S. District Court Judge John Wood made no secret of their belief that Lee Chagra's involvement in the drug business went beyond being a defence attorney.

After Chagra was murdered, El Paso police sealed his office and allowed agents of DEA and the Internal Revenue Service to inspect some of his 4,000 legal files.

"The court finds there were criminal violations," El Paso District Judge Woodrow W. Bean II determined after conducting a court of inquiry. "The type of search conducted in this case disturbs the court and should disturb everyone. It would allow police to violate the files of a CPA, physician, lawyer, newspaper, clergy, banker, businessman or anyone else."

Though the county attorney declined to prosecute on these findings, the court of inquiry reinforced a belief in El Paso that authorities will do almost anything to get at Chagra. Attorney Joseph Chargra, at 31 the youngest of the three brothers, believes this attitude is based upon the failure of the government indictment against Lee. He predicted after his brother's murder that Jimmy would be indicted and that material in the files would be used as leads by the prosecution.

Jimmy Chagra has returned to Las Vegas where he is no longer a familiar figure at the crap tables. He is involved in a bigger gamble now, one that could cost him up to 45 years in prison.

Chagra is proud of his reputation as a gambler. That alone would be enough to earn the enmity of Boyd, the hard-nosed Texas prosecutor who wants Chagra behind bars.

"I've never met one who wasn't a liar and a cheat," Boyd says of gamblers. "Their whole aim is to get your money any way they can."

Perspectives

By Rev. J. A. Davidson

"Half the harm that is done in this world
Is due to people who want to feel important."

Those are words spoken by Reilly, the psychiatrist in T. S. Eliot's play, The Cocktail Party. Then he explains:

"They don't mean to do harm — but the harm
does not interest them,
Or they do not see it, or they justify it
Because they are absorbed in the endless struggle
To think well of themselves."

Alfred Adler, one of the makers of modern psychiatry and psychology, held that the self-assertive impulse is the dominant force in our life. Out of his research and his clinical experience, and disagreeing with Sigmund Freud, Adler came to the belief that the self-assertive impulse is stronger than the sexual. Whatever may be the final truth on this, there can be no doubting that the self-assertive impulse is tremendously strong in us: you have only to look honestly into your own heart to find ample proof of that.

Early in life each of us begins playing a big-shot role. No one is more self-assertive than a baby. And little boys and little girls quickly learn cute and clever ways of making themselves seem very important, of getting themselves into whatever limelights they can find.

In adolescence the V.I.P. urge, the big-shot impulse, comes into exuberant full-bloom: the self-assertion, the self-assurance, the self-appreciation, of the teens and early twenties is often an awesome thing to behold. But we older people, we who pride ourselves on our maturity and sophistication, must not be presumptuous about this: most of us are very efficient (and not always in subtle ways, in expression of the self-assertive impulse.

One day Jesus had trouble with the V.I.P. urge manifesting intself in two of his disciples, James and John: you can read about it in the 10th chapter (verse 35 to 45) of Mark's Gospel.

Jesus recognizes that the self-assertive is quite normal and that it tends to express itself as a quest for power. (St. Augustine, with this in mind, saw the passionate desire to dominate others as the prime expression of sin.)

Jesus was neither surprised nor shocked to find the self-assertive impulse so strong in his disciples: he was a realist about human nature. He knew that there was no final rooting-out of anyone's drive to be a Very Important Person. He didn't tell his disciples that if only they showed a little more will-power they would be able to handle it very nicely. Rather, he told them that they could come to terms with it and that they must come to terms with it. He made it very clear to them that the self-assertive impulse can be handled only by re-directing it from channels of self-aggrandizement into channels of outgoing, compassionate service. "Among you," he said, "whoever would be great must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be the willing slave of all."

In the Christian scheme of things the Very Important Persons are only those who serve compassionately the needs and sufferings of others. Well?

Moral cleanliness assembly theme

Keeping Clean and Zealous for Fine Works is the theme of the semi-annual circuit assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses today and Sunday at S.J. Willis school on Quadra.

The program features talks and interviews on the need to eradicate literal and moral pollution in society and to build up a positive approach to living.

Highlights include a water baptism at noon today, and at 1:30 p.m. Sunday, Richard Grant of Toronto will carry the assembly theme into public address.

Overseer George Wilson of Victoria said Christ emphasized cleanliness in his life's works and teachings and by example.

"Moral cleanliness is often put secondary to literal cleanliness, but both aspects are most important . . . A lead must be taken against the moral degradation that is affecting family life and society, and as Jehovah's Witnesses we urge sincere persons to keep clean and zealous for fine works, and to view the Bible as containing the solution to human problems."

The format, which starts at noon, involves a 20-minute address, 20 minutes of questions and discussion. Bring a bag lunch. Tea and coffee free. Parking behind church.

Bruce Scott, a young recording artist from Toronto, and president of Bruce Scott Ministries, has been brought to Victoria by the Saanich Baptist Church, as part of a province-wide program of Christian communication called Encounter '79, of the regular Baptist churches of B.C.

Encounter '79 is an effort to help people deal with the basic and vital problems of relationships, whether they be personal, family, social, or international.

The general public of Victoria will be welcome to hear Scott at his final presentation on Sunday at 10 a.m. at the church's school meeting place.

After several months of operation Cross Roads Academy is on solid ground, says Rev. Ronald Surry, evangelist and administrator of the academy.

Academy enrolment is 51 students and the staff consists of three full-time teachers, two full-time paraprofessionals, three part-time paraprofessionals and six regular monitors.

The school came about after several people from different churches conceived of starting a new school that would cross all denominational lines. The aim of the school was to offer, as much as possible, a totally individualized program that was academically sound and grounded deeply in a Christian environment that would be trans-denominational.

Surry says this aim has been successfully achieved and that the school is daily witnessing new heights in that commitment.

Cross Roads Academy is an alternative school designed to appeal to the intellectually alert and highly motivated student. It offers an accelerated education to every student it accepts.

The program includes an emphasis on reading, writing and arithmetic, and also includes PE and arts and crafts. The school stresses an achievement level of 80 per cent, with anything less considered to indicate an area of incompetence with the given material.

Persons interested in the school should contact Cross Roads Academy, 3460 Shelbourne Street, Victoria, V8P 4G5, phone 592-4914.

Salvationists eye missions

Lieut.-Col. Dorothy Purser, second-in-command of Salvation Army Forces in the Caribbean and Central America territory, will be a guest speaker at the Salvation Army's Vancouver Island missionary conference at the Victoria Citadel Corps, 757 Pandora, She was attending the group meeting at 9:30 a.m. today and the missionary rally at 8 p.m.

Mrs. Purser brings to Canada broad administrative experience as well as knowledge and skills which have given her an effective ministry in the United Kingdom, the U.S., and in her homeland of Jamaica.

Her grasp of the needs and opportunities in developing countries provide the authority of first-hand experience as she enables Canadian Salvationists to become more aware of their missionary responsibilities.

Lieut.-Col. Purser

Featured speaker at today's 8 p.m. missionary rally is Captain James Lau, Divisional Commander, Taiwan. Lau, a native of Hong Kong, was trained in Canada at the College of Officers, Toronto.

Quakers take stand

No taxes for arms theme of meeting

A meeting Thursday will discuss alternatives to paying taxes for arms and war-related purposes, at the Friends (Quakers) Meeting House, 1831 Fern, at 8 p.m.

Protests against war taxes have a long history, beginning at least as far back as the barons who forced King John to sign the Magna Carta, and include John Woolman and 20 Philadelphia Quakers who refused to pay war tax to King George III in 1755, Henry Thoreau, American philosopher, who refused to pay war tax to his government during the American-Mexican war of the 1840s, and many others.

Today, protesters believe that the government should provide a legal alternative to war taxes for those whose consciences prevent them from supporting killing, just as alternative service is provided for conscientious objectors during wartime.

A panel to include Myron Zarry, Femming Hansen, Ben Metcalfe and Bob Skelly, will discuss methods of tax refusal, legal implications, and a peace tax fund. Suggested letters to accompany income tax returns, will be available. The meeting is sponsored by the Victoria Religious Society of Friends and the Victoria Coalition for Disarmament.

Women Coming on Strong As Karate Grabs Hefty Hold

In Victoria, it is not uncommon to see classes of 25 warming up at the Bateson Karate School at 719 Yates.

About a quarter of the students are women anxious to engage in a healthy sport and at the same time, learn something about self-defence.

Since opening his studio Lin Bateson has seen, besides a gradual rise in female enrolment, an improvement in achievement.

"The quality is better — they (the women) are more aggressive," he said.

One girl is qualifying for her black belt and two are working on their brown.

"They are really coming along," Bateson said.

About 50 per cent of beginners have staying power and come back next year for advanced training and go competitive.

The advent of safety gear has allowed the growth of two concepts: combat in which opponents touch but do not strike each other and contact duels employing padded gloves and foot pads.

Competition, including contact tournaments, takes place almost every month in meets at home, in Vancouver, Seattle and points south to Portland.

"Our guys are really good that way. They take victory or defeat in stride."

Saudis Fear N. Yemen To Be Another Lebanon

By JONATHAN RANDAL

SANA, North Yemen (WP) — Nowhere are Saudi Arabia's worries about its fragile security and precarious oil-based future more apparent than in mountainous North Yemen.

A formal Saudi ally — critics even say satellite — North Yemen is seeking Western, especially American, help to defend itself not only from military threats from Marxist South Yemen, but also from encroachments by its oil-rich neighbor and nominal protector.

Much of the Saudis' dilemma here is of their own making. Unless they are both astute and lucky, their past errors may already have set in train events that could turn strategically located North Yemen into the Arabian Peninsula's equivalent of the running sore that has all but destroyed Lebanon on the Mediterranean.

A possible indication of things to come was provided Wednesday night when Syria, Libya and the Palestine Liberation Organization walked out of an Arab ministers' meeting in Baghdad to protest Saudi Arabia's refusal to carry out stiff sanctions against Egypt for signing a peace treaty with Israel. Iraq, as host to the conference, did not walk out, but backed the three hard-liners in their demands for tough reprisals.

At the same time in Kuwait, Iraq and Syria were deeply involved in Arab League efforts to solidify the nominal cease-fire between North and South Yemen, designed to prevent further fighting almost all observers fear is inevitable.

Not much imagination is required to summon forth a scenario in which Syria and Iraq could show their displeasure at the Saudis by ceasing to press their military Marxist friends in South Yemen to behave themselves. Given the Aden government's military superiority — which $400 million worth of Saudi-financed American hardware is not expected to dent significantly for some time — another South Yemen push would then seem a distinct possibility.

As was the case in last month's border war, South Yemen's hundreds of Soviet and Cuban military advisers could be counted on to further the Kremlin's long-term objective of softening up Saudi Arabia.

The Saudi predicament became patently clear last month during the Yemeni border fighting when the Riyadh government did nothing more than cancel leave for its 60,000-man armed forces and withdraw its peacekeeping troops from Lebanon. Such relative impotence was the logical result of longstanding Saudi indecision over Yemeni policy.

Had the Saudis actively implemented a 1975 agreement to provide North Yemen with modern arms to meet the South Yemeni military threat, Aden might well have thought twice before launching the border war. Instead, the Saudis dragged their feet.

They were certainly concerned about South Yemen's Marxism, which makes no secret of its hopes of overthrowing the Saudi royal family as well as other conservative Arab governments. But they were equally fearful of turning the buffer in Sana into anything smacking of a major military power. With its 6 million inhabitants, North Yemen is more heavily populated than the rest of the Arabian Peninsula combined.

Nor are North Yemenis entirely happy with Saudi Arabia, despite rich official praise. Saudi Arabia provides $200 million in annual grants, and work for more than a million Yemenis who remit an estimated $1.5 billion a year. But, as one Yemeni official recalled, "The Saudis are our natural enemies."

Saudi Arabia annexed two Yemeni provinces in 1934. Today the Yemenis, who like to recall they are descendants of the queen of Sheba and look down their noses at the latecomers in Riyadh, resent the treatment afforded their hardworking kinsmen in Saudi Arabia.

Saudi arms and money helped keep alive the nasty civil war from 1962 to 1969 that pitted their royalist proteges against the repub' cans who finally won.

Seniors Granted $12,000

New Horizon program grants totalling more than $12,000 have been approved for four Victoria senior groups.

The largest single federal health and welfare grant goes to the Extended Care Hospital Organization.

The group will get $4,169 to set up shops at Glengarry Extended Care Hospital and Priory Extended Care Hospital catering to needs of elderly patients.

The Marrian Gardens New Horizons Group will receive $4,155 to organize a recreational, social and crafts program and a grant of $2,550 will go to the Capital Regional District's advisory council on long term care to establish a committee to promote home support services and foster advocacy groups for citizens on long term care programs.

A final grant of $1,496 has been approved for the Saanich Lapidary Club to expand its programs in the Hampton Senior Citizens' Centre.

Tests Ordered On Hair Dryers

OTTAWA (CP) — Hand-held hair dryers sold in Canada will undergo safety tests after a U.S. environmental group warned that the devices may blow harmful amounts of asbestos in the user's face.

Jim Black, head of the product safety branch of consumer and corporate affairs, said tests will begin immediately. The tests would be conducted with the Canadian Standards Association and results should be available within two weeks, he said Thursday.

U.S. government tests show some hair dryers release asbestos fibres, which scientists have linked with an increased risk of lung cancer and other serious diseases.

Asbestos is used in some models to insulate the liner of the device from the heat it generates.

Black said he suspects many of the products sold in the U.S. are similar to those sold in Canada. "There's not that much difference in models."

The Environmental Defence Fund, a private U.S. group, estimated that there may be 10 million such dryers. It has filed a petition with the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission asking that asbestos insulation liners be banned from use in hand-held dryers.

Widow Wins Fraud Award

The widow of a Victoria man and the executors of his estate have won a $35,000 judgment against a former employee of an investment company.

Mabel Grace Pounder and Canada Trust Company will recover the amount from Richard R. Good, a Vancouver man who used to work for McDermid, Miller and McDermid Ltd.

Mr. Justice George Murray of B.C. Supreme Court said the investment company was not liable because it was purely a personal or private transaction between Pounder and Good.

"The defendant Good may be politely described as a scoundrel or somewhat less politely as a crook," said Murray. "There is no question in my mind that he defrauded the late Mr. Pounder of the sum of $35,000."

The money was advanced by Pounder to Good for the purchase of bonds. When the bonds failed to materialize, Good provided a personal cheque but "it turned out to be completely elastic."

Pounder died Jan. 16, 1976.

Backroom Brainstrust Key to PM's Chances

By PAUL WHITELAW
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Ask the average voter to identify Jim Coutts and you'll draw a blank stare. The same reaction will greet the name Arnie Patterson.

Keith Davey? Tnat one will probably ring a bell but only if it's preceded by the impressive title of Senator.

What they have in common is the confidence of Pierre Trudeau that they, if anyyone can, will be able to help him win enough seats in the May 22 election to remain as prime minister.

Coutts, Patterson and Davey are the Liberals' top campaign strategists, the men whose advice will shape the policies Trudeau will announce on the hustings and the image he will project.

Although Canadians won't have an opportunity to make an X next to their names on any ballot, the accuracy of the strategists' hunches will be a critical factor in thh outcome of the election.

On a day-to-day basis, Coutts is the man who has the greatest potential to influence policy, something he's been doing since 1975 as Trudeau's principal secretary. Travelling aboard the PM's chartered campaign jet, seated in a VIP section away from the accompanying news media, he'll have Trudeau's captive attention for up to several hours a day.

Coutts, 40, has described himself as a hair's breath to the left of centre on the ideological spectrum. But he is above all a tough political pragmatist.

It was the PM's principal secretary who was instrumental in convincing Alberta MP Jack Horner to quit the Conservatives in exchange for a Liberal cabinet post. As a Tory, Horner's right-wing views and opposition to public service bilingualism made Liberals cringe.

Although Coutts has vigorously denied it, he is widely believed to have pushed last fall for a referendum on capital punishment to defuse what is an embarrassing issue for the Liberals in many ridings.

As principal secretary, he engineered the government's August budget cuts, dictating orders to cabinet ministers.

A lawyer and Harvard Business School graduate, Coutts was a partner in a highly-successful Toronto business consulting firm when he joined the Liberal campaign team in the 1974 election. His task was to accompany Trudeau and assure that the PM followed the campaign battle plan, which kept to a bare minimum the number of spontaneous encounters between the PM and reporters.

His appointment the following year as principal secretary was an indication of what one Liberal calls the "good chemistry" between them.

While Coutts is the top policy adviser

It wasn't the first time Coutts had worked in the Prime Minister's Office. From 1963 to 1966 he had been Lester Pearson's appointments secretary.
on the campaign plane, it is Patterson who is in charge of selling those policies to the news media and the public.

A gregarious, outgoing radio station owner from Dartmouth, N.S., Patterson, 50, joined the PM's staff in February in the key position of communications director. In that short time, he has made a partly-successful effort to end the seige mentality in the PM's office toward contact with reporters.

Separatism Fight Vowed by Trudeau

CAMROSE, Alta. (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau capped the first western swing of his campaign Friday with a pledge to fight western and Quebec separatism with equal vigor.

"We are fighting a lot of provincial separatisms," Trudeau told a crowd of about 2,000 cheering Liberals in a military drill hall in this Alberta community 80 kilometres southeast of Edmonton.

Trudeau made the comments at a rally designed to help boost Jack Horner's re-election hopes.

"Fellow cowboys," Trudeau began to warm applause. Then he ignored a draft text of a prepared speech and launched into a spirited defence of his government's constitutional and energy policies while attacking those of Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark.

As he finished, an aide reminded him he was scheduled to announce an increase in the price of natural gas. Trudeau returned to the microphone to say the price of gas will rise May 1 to $2.30 U.S. for 1,000 cubic feet from the current price of $2.16 U.S.

The increase, he said, would add about $140 million a year in additonal revenue for producers of natural gas and bring the total value of natural gas exports to $3.3 billion U.S. a year.

Clark was determined to be friends with Conservative premiers Peter Lougheed in oil-producing Alberta and William Davis in oil-consuming Ontario, Trudeau said.

"What do you do when your friends are in conflict?" Trudeau asked rhetorically. "You sit."

THE 54TH HASTINGS INTERNATIONAL CHESS CONGRESS

By Grandmaster
Larry Christiansen

The 1978-79 Hastings International Chess Congress was won by the Swedish Grandmaster Ulf Andersson. Andersson was never really close to losing as he finished a full point ahead of his nearest rivals. His patient, methodical technique paid off handsomely, notching five wins without a loss.

Behind Andersson at 8½ points were two Soviet Grandmasters, Evgeny Yasyukov and Alexander Kochiev, Hungarian Grandmaster Istran Csom and International Master Jonathon Speelman, who proved to be the top British player in this 54th Hastings event.

On their heels with 8 points were Grandmasters Larry Christiansen and Anatoly Lein of the U.S. and International Master Jonathon Mestel of England. At 7½ points and just out of the prize money were Canadian Grandmaster Peter Biyasis and British International Master William Hartston. The fact that ten of the fifteen players managed to score beyond the break-even point is an indication of the tough competition in this year's tournament.

Other scores were: Shaun Taulbut at 5½ points; George Botterill and Rumanian Mihail Suba at 5; U.S. Master Jack Peters at 4 and M. Balsham of Israel at 3.

This year's tournament was sponsored by International Computers, Ltd., in co-operation with the British Chess Federation. Here is an illustrative game from the torunament (my notes).

ELECTION 79

Socreds To Be Led By Roy

ST. GEORGES-DE-BEAUCE, Que. (CP) — Fabien Roy ended the suspense and told a hometown crowd Friday night that he will lead the Social Credit Party in the May 22 federal election.

The leader and only sitting member of the Popular National Party in the Quebec national assembly said he will resign his seat next week as required by the Quebec legislature act.

Roy, who turns 51 on April 17, said that in the coming campaign his party will stress the Liberal government's dismal record on the economy and its "aggression" against provincial governments.

Nude Garden Party Not Running

Neither will the Modernization Party of Canada, nor the American Party of Canada, nor the Canadian Alternative Party.

Joe Completes His Day On an Upbeat Note

Times News Services

Joe Clark's invasion of Liberal ridings in the key area of southern Ontario ended on an upbeat note Friday with a swinging jazz band, popping balloons and more than 800 Progressive Conservative supporters shouting, "Go Joe, Go Joe."

In Kitchener, Clark said the RCMP should seek cabinet permission when the force feels it necessary to break laws.

And once the cabinet gave its approval for illegal activities, the minister responsible "would have to carry the can."

Clark's remarks to a reporter came only a few days after testimony to a royal commission was released, indicating the cabinet knew of such surreptitious RCMP acts such as breaking and entering since 1970.

His visit later to the nearby riding of Mississauga North, which Revenue Minister Tony Abbott hopes to win, marked the end of Clark's first sortie in the campaign for the May 22 election.

Rally organizers estimated the perspiring crowd, overflowing from a hotel ballroom, at 800 to 1,000.

The Conservatives are hopeful of winning several seats in the Toronto region, including Abbott's. Their hopes were boosted by winning four of five October byelections in the Metropolitan Toronto area. The fifth went NDP.

NDP leader Ed Broadbent also campaigned in soutern Ontario, noting the parallel campaign of corporations like IBM, Esso, Gulf and the Conservative and Liberal parties.

"It's well known they contribute to the Conservative and Liberal parties."

Broadbent pointed out that the NDP had "always publicized every penny" it received in campaign contributions "long before required to do so by the 1974 Elections Expenses Act."

The NDP's elections war chest contains about $1.2 million, according to a party official.

During after-dinner remarks in St. Catharines, Broadbent momentarily lost his voice and gagged, but quickly recovered to say in jest: "The doctors are getting even."

Earlier, Broadbent and his wife, Lucille, braved a cold breeze and drizzle outside a General Motors of Canada Ltd. truck assemly plant in Oshawa where scores of UAW members stopped to shake hands and wish him luck.

TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): Accent on money, getting more of it, using what you have in constructive manner. Keep promise to "fix things" in the home. Purchase of item to make surroundings more beautiful, comfortable could also be on agenda. Another Taurus figures prominently.

GEMINI (May 21 - June 20): Lunar cycle moves up — your timing, intuition, decisions are on target. Be direct, confident enough to eschew self-deception. See as is, define terms, go to source. Pisces, Virgo and another Gemini play important roles.

CANCER (June 21 - July 22): What had been obscure comes into sharp, clear focus. You have "inside" view. Dreams and their meanings are clarified. Cash position shows improvement. Responsibilities increase. Capricorn is involved.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22): Good lunar aspect coincides now with sensing what is ahead. Perceive and believe — in yourself. Express, write, travel, advertise. You learn, teach and locate what had been lost or stolen. You take more seriously the concept of "spiritual revelation."

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Spotlight on what "holds" you. Learn what compels — desire, obligation, fear or law. Engage in self-discovery. You could be "seeing yourself" in partner or mate. You can be "released" only when you so decide. The time is in your hands!

IF APRIL 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY this should be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring more details, concentration, specific tasks and greater security — as result of temporary restrictions. In April, relationship is intensfied. You gain prestige — and money. You are creative, temperamental, independent, inventive, headstrong, daring, a pioneer in sense of being courageous enough to lead rather than follow. You are "spoiled" by the opposite sex. You will fight to have your own way, but when the battle is finished you can be generous to a fault. Others can win you with flattery. If they attempt to push, cajole, force or threaten, you'll rear back and throw a haymaker.

Even a Little Bit of Lead Can Affect Schoolchildren

BOSTON (AP) — Small amounts of lead in the body can turn schoolchildren into frustrated, impulsive daydreamers, while higher levels of the poisonous metal seriously lower their intelligence, a study shows.

The doctors say their findings prove that lower amounts of lead than previously thought can be dangerous to youngsters.

They found that the more lead found in children's bodies, the more trouble they have paying attention in class.

"Lead exposure at doses below those producing symptoms severe enough to be diagnosed clinically appears to be associated with neuropsychologic deficits that may interfere with classroom performance," the researchers wrote.

A report on the research, conducted at Children's Hospital Medical Centre in Boston, was published in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Previous studies have measured the amounts of lead in children's blood. But the Boston doctors said this method is inaccurate, because lead may disappear from the bloodstream while it builds up in other organs.

So instead, they measured the amount of lead found in baby teeth shed by 2,335 Grade 1 and 2 students in Chelsea and Somerville, two blue-collar cities near Boston.

They found the children with the highest levels of lead in their teeth scored far worse on IQ tests than those with the least amount of lead. However, none of the children showed any detectable physical signs of lead poisoning.

Children take in lead primarily from eating chips of crumbling lead-based paint, which was once widely used in houses.

"A lot of lead can cause retardation; nobody quarrels with that," Dr. Herbert Needleman, who directed the study, said in an interview. "But it's only been in the past couple of years that people have been willing to give some respect to the idea that a little bit of lead can produce impairment. I think this study pretty clearly establishes that."

School teachers graded the children on whether they were distractible, disorganized, impulsive, frustrated or unable to follow instructions.

Then the researchers divided the children into six categories. The first had less than 5.1 parts per million of lead in their teeth, while the sixth had more than 27.

They found that for each increase in the amount of lead, the children performed more poorly in class.

About 11 per cent of the children in the lowest-lead category did poorly over all, compared with approximately 30 per cent in the highest group.

Irish Pound Breaks Free

LONDON (Reuter) — Ireland has broken its centuries-old currency links with Britain under which the two countries have used basically the same currency in their extensive trade and travel dealings.

Within minutes of its new currency independence Friday, the Irish pound sank slightly against the pound sterling and the U.S. dollar.

Some alarm was reported in the strife-torn British province of Northern Ireland, where pounds sterling, special equal-value Northern Ireland notes and Irish pounds have been circulating side by side.

The release of the Irish pound from the British pound marks in effect the cutting of the last of the imperial links between Britain and the Republic of Ireland which became independent in 1921 and formed its own currency, the Irish pound, pegged to sterling.

The break was made by the Dublin central bank after the pound sterling, which has been strong recently on foreign exchange markets, pulled the Irish pound up with it, putting strains on the Irish monetary system.

The Dublin bank suspended dealings in the Irish currency, and when dealings were restored, dealers said the Irish pound was worth between 99.75 and 99.90 pence against the pound sterling.

Ireland, along with seven of its European Economic Community partners, joined the new European Monetary System (EMS) which came into force March 13. The one EEC member which did not join the EMS was Britain.

By joining, Ireland pledged to keep its currency floating within limits against the other EMS currencies, and not to allow it to fall below or rise above these limits.

The pound sterling has been rising recently because the markets have been attracted by Britain's North Sea oil wealth, and the rise sharpened this week when the Labor government lost a parliamentary confidence vote and set May 3 as the date for a new general election. Many businessmen have said they hope for a Conservative victory.

Universe To Expand For Ever?

NEW YORK (AP) — A satellite studying x-rays coming from deep space has sent back new evidence the universe may expand forever, its galaxies rushing away from each other at speeds approaching that of light, scientists say.

The satellite, known as the Einstein observatory, is providing the first detailed pictures of x-ray-emitting objects other than the sun.

Dr. Riccardo Giacconi of the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory in Cambridge, Mass., principal investigator for the project, said the observatory's preliminary results should promote debate over whether the universe is "open," and constantly expanding, or "closed," meaning it eventually would collapse back on itself.

Of course, the time scales involved in such a collapse are mind-boggling — the sun would have long burned out before the universe collapsed. But the subject is of intense interest to cosmologists trying to understand nature on its largest scale.

Both views — collapse and expansion — depend on the currently accepted theory that the universe began with a cataclysmic explosion known as the Big Bang.

Grapevine Foils Censors In Poland

By SYLVANA FOX

WARSAW (UPI) — Information-hungry Poles satisfy their thirst for news with "underground" newspapers and a rumor network jokingly dubbed the P.P.P.

Poland's mass media is strictly censored despite the communist government's reputation as the most tolerant of criticism and individual expression in the Soviet Bloc.

But traditionally and fiercely independent Poles, undaunted by such restrictions, beat the censor by producing some 20 uncontrolled — and illegal — underground periodicals.

The most far-raching source of unofficial information, however, is the gossip mill known as the Pewna Pani Powiedziela (P.P.P.) which roughly translates as: "Someone told a lady I know..."

"We also call it the Slippers' Grapevine" because the news is spread by housewives sitting at home in their bedroom slippers," said a Polish journalist.

Western diplomats speak admiringly of the P.P.P. as "a truly fantastic network for passing on information."

"The authorities can confiscate typewriters, printing presses and caches of underground newspapers," said one diplomat. "But they can't confiscate all those mouths."

Polish officials are philosophical about the P.P.P. and admit they use it themselves to keep abreast of "inside" party and government business.

"In America, two people get on the phone and gossip about their neighbors," said an information department official. "Here they gossip about whether the such-and-such a minister is in disfavor or whether a party shakeup is in the works. And the rumors, true and untrue, spread like brush fires."

Though the mimeographed periodicals circulate only from 2,000 to 15,000 copies, they reach many more people as they pass from reader to reader.

Bureaucrats in Warsaw, accustomed to the comforts of a captive press, are annoyed by the illegal papers but reluctant to crackdown too hard for fear of provoking unrest.

"The independent press is part of the price the authorities must pay for the toleration of society," said Jacek Kuron, a 45-year-old sociologist who heads a dissident human rights group called the Committee for Social Self-Defence.

In addition to keeping a rein on police harassment of illegal papers, Kuron said the regime of party chief Edward Gierek also pays for the toleration of its citizens with more freedom to travel abroad and the showing of Western films — "something that would be unthinkable in Czechoslovakia, East Germany or the Soviet Union."

"We also get striptease in our cabaraets and nude pin-up girls in our magazines," added a Polish journalist. "The government is always pointing those out as examples of the wide freedoms we enjoy."

The authorities do occasionally raid the illegal press network.

"They have to put the screws on the underground press every now and then," said a Western diplomat. "They have to show their own citizens and, more important, they have to prove to Moscow that they're still in charge."

Kuron, whose Committee for Social Self-Defence publishes one of the largest independent papers, Robotnik (The Worker), termed the harassment minor.

"They confiscate whatever they find, but they don't find much," he said. "Not even people on the committee know who does the printing or where it's done. I don't know myself.

"Everything is done in a separate place. Every page is printed in a different location and never twice in the same house," he said. "So if they find out and raid one place, we only lose one page and one printing press."

Gustave's Wonder is 90 Today

PARIS (UPI) — What's big and brown, looks like a clothespin, has appeared in hundreds of films and paintings, weighs 7,000 tons and turns 90 years old today?

It only could be the Eiffel Tower, one of the world's most visited tourist sights.

Since its opening at the Paris Exhibition of 1889, more than 70 million people have visited the tower, sometimes referred to as the worlds tallest lamp post.

Each year, Gustave Eiffel's engineering wonder has more than 3 million visitors, who take away 1.9 miniature copies of the tower and send 1.5 million postcard pictures of it to the folks back home.

"I should be jealous of the tower — it's more famous than I am," Eiffel said shortly before his death in 1923.

Besides attracting tourists, the tower also has drawn a good number of publicity seekers. People have climbed it backwards, on their hands, on stilts, piggyback and naked. The mayor of Montmartre once rode down it on a bycycle.

The tower also has been deadly. Hundreds of persons have jumped to their deaths from the Paris landmark. A pilot once was killed while trying to fly his plane through the tower's arches and a Hungarian tailor made a fatal leap when he attempted to demonstrate a combination raincoat and parachute.

The Eiffel Tower can gain weight and shrink. A freeze can decrease its height by six inches. A new paint job, performed once every seven years by 60 men who take four months to complete the task, will put on extra weight. It takes 6,000 gallons of paint to cover the towers 210,000 square yards of surface.

There are 1,710 steps leading to the top of structure, which took 200 men about 27 months to construct at a cost of $1.6 million.

The tourist sight almost never made it past its 20th birthday. It was scheduled to be torn down in 1909 and was saved from destruction only when the French army discovered its tower would make an excellent communication station for army posts stationed hundreds of miles away.

United On Strike

CHICAGO (AP) — Thousands of passengers scheduled to fly on United Airlines today were grounded or looking for other means of travel after machinists went on strike against the largest U.S. air carrier.

The airline cancelled all flights until April 10 after the Machinists union, which represents 18,000 employees, including mechanics, flight dispatchers and ramp and service workers, went on strike at 12:01 a.m. EST today.

A cost-of-living clause is the key unresolved issue, a union official said. No new negotiations were scheduled.

RADIATION!

FUNNY SIDE to the Three Mile Island radiation leak is seen by youthful trio who rode nearby in an open convertible. But the jest may turn out to be not so funny as they were taking their ride at a time when residents had been warned to stay indoors

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Scientists struggled to cool down the stricken Three Mile Island nuclear power plant today, while officials assured the area's 130,000 residents that chances of a catastrophic melt-down were "very remote."

The potential disaster has developed into a waiting game and it will be several days before the final decision is made on how to solve the crucial problem of how to avoid a melt-down, and perhaps months before the problem is entirely cleaned up.

"There were no surprises throughout the night," said Walter Creitz, president of Metropolitan Edison, one of a consortium of utilities that runs the plant.

"The venting is continuing," he said. "We're maintaining the temperature. We don't want to lower the temperature because that would lower the pressure and increase the size of the bubble." He was referring to a bubble of radioactive vapor that is threatening the reactor's core.

Gov. Dick Thornburgh said at a news conference late Friday that no general evacuation of the area is necessary "at this time." However, he repeated his recommendation that young children and pregnant women living within eight kilometres of the plant leave the area.

But many of the 130,000 people who live within 16 kilometres of the plant, located on an island in the Susquehanna River near Harrisburg, packed their belonging and left anyway.

At midmorning, radiation was still being vented into the atmosphere at the Susquehanna River plant site, said George Troffer, a plant official. Officials of the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) had said they hoped to halt the releases sometime today.

At a morning briefing at NRC headquarters in Washington, NRC official Jim Hanchett said lead bricks were being sent to the Harrisburg site for use in a shield around a device called a "hydrogen recombiner" in an auxiliary building.

When the shield is completed, officials will begin pulling hydrogen from the containment building into the recombiner, which "burns the hydrogen and makes it back into water."

At the tiny community of Goldsboro, which sits several hundred yards from the plant, Mayor Kenneth Myers said, "It looks like a ghost town now," after three-fourths of the 600 residents moved out.

Harold Denton, an operations director for the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) sent here by President Carter, said the possibility of a melt-down of the nuclear core was "very remote." But he termed the mishap, "easily the most serious accident in the licensed reactor program."

It will be several days before the final decision is made on how to siphon off the bubble hovering in a sealed reactor dome and perhaps months before the problem is entirely cleaned up, Denton said.

The mysterious malfunction at the plant, which has been in operation just three months, prompted Carter to say Friday that it will probably lead to stricter safety standards for nuclear facilities.

Gov. Thornburgh, who stayed in constant contact with the White House through the day, had ordered the closing of 23 schools within an eight-kilometre radius of the disabled plant after the first burst of radioactivity was reported at 9 a.m. Friday.

If the bubble keeps growing it poses a two-pronged dilemma:

It might expose the core's tip, exposing its 177 uranium rods. Denton said up to 50 per cent of the fuel elements may have been damaged when the initial accident occurred before dawn Wednesday.

It might also force the plant's primary cooling system to vapor lock, making the core so hot the uranium would melt.

Either would lead to a melt-down, an uncontrolled reaction that might burn it's way through the reactor's floor and into the earth while spewing vast amounts of radiation.

Nuclear Power Dealt Major Blow

By J. P. SMITH
The Washington Post
(An Analysis)

WASHINGTON — Whatever the direct damage caused by the accident at Three Mile Island nuclear plant, the political consequences for the American atomic power industry could be profound.

The Pennsylvania incident is the latest in a series of episodes that may undermine the years of assurances by the industry and its governmental allies that a major accident of Three Mile Island proportions could not occur.

In recent months:

—Five nuclear power plants on the East Coast have been shut down because their resistance to earthquake damage was determined to be insufficient.

—The Nuclear Regulatory Commission repudiated the Rasmussen report, a major, government-commissioned study of atomic safety that concluded the risk of nuclear disaster is very small.

—The trial opened in a suit brought by the estate of Karen Silkwood, a plutonium plant worker killed in an auto crash, in which a

Jane Fonda has won the Academy Award only once although in recent years she has become a perennial nominee.

She won for Klute in 1971 and her subsequent nominations include her performance one year ago in Julia.

Fonda started in movies in 1960 and quickly attracted some prominent co-stars including Lee Marvin who won an Oscar opposite her in Cat Ballou in 1965 and Robert Redford who became a box office hit with her for Barefoot in the Park in 1967.

Although popular for her art, Fonda became controversial during the 1960s for her militant stand against U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

Ironcially, she has been nominated this year for Coming Home, which is about the Vietnam war.

Her chances may depend upon the attitude of the Academy of Arts and Science towards her political activities, although her recent spate of nominations appears to suggest that all has been forgiven. Her performance in Coming Home was first rate.

Readers who correctly predict the Oscar winner for best actress, best actor and best movie, as awarded on April 9, will be entered for a chance to win a trip for two Hollywood or one of five major runner-up prizes in the annual Times-CJVI Visit the Stars contest.

BAGHDAD, Iraq - Hardline and moderate Arabs broke their deadlock today and agreed to a complete economic boycott of Egypt and an eventual break in all diplomatic relations with President Anwar Sadat's government, conference sources reported.

The reported agreement, reached on the fifth day of negotiations, indicated the conservative bloc led by Saudi Arabia has acceded to almost all the hardline demands for sanctions against Sadat for signing a peace treaty with Israel.

A member of the Kuwaiti delegation announced the accord to journalists, and other conference sources confirmed the report, which came as a suprise to many observers who thought the radical-moderate split seemed irreparable.

The sources said the 18 countries in the Arab League attending the conference and the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO) have agreed to:

—Stop all Arab aid to Egypt. A proposal to withdraw all Arab official and private investments from Egyptian banks was dropped on grounds that the Sadat government likely would seize them.

—Immediately withdraw all ambassadors from Cairo. Jordan already has done so, as have the hardline regimes of Syria, Libya, Algeria, South Yemen and the PLO.

—A complete cut in government-to-government relations with Egypt at the time of each country's choosing. A Saudi journalist said this was an insistence of the conservative Persian Gulf states which wanted the option of choosing the time of a diplomatic cutoff, although the hardliners wanted an immediate total break.

King Khaled of Saudi Arabia has said his country will end relations with Egypt "the day the Israeli flag flies over Cairo," a Saudi reporter said. The flag is expected to fly when Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin visits Cairo.

Economists in Cairo believe Egypt could survive a reduction of aid from oil-producing states and that trade embargoes would have little impact, since less than 10 per cent of Egypt's trade is with Arab countries.

But the economists feel Egypt would be seriously hurt if the oil-rich states withdrew bank deposits in Egyptian banks, estimated at more than $2 billion.

Meanwhile, President Sadat today returned to Cairo where millions of cheering Egyptians greeted him in what officials said was a people's endorsement of the peace treaty with Israel. Sadat was met by a 21-gun salute as he emerged from his Boeing 707, smiling and waving to crowds.

Prices Up for Butter, Cheese, Milk Powder

OTTAWA (CP) — Butter, skim milk powder and cheese are going to cost more next week in light of a federal decision to increase prices paid to dairy farmers.

The announcement rushed out by the agriculture department Friday, two days before the new dairy year starts, represents a small pay raise but little else for farmers who produce milk for dairy products. Dairy policy announcements often come after the start of the new dairy year.

Table milk is regulated by the provinces and is not affected by the federal announcement. However, fluid producers apply pressure to the provinces for more money.

Butter will cost five cents a pound more and skim milk powder three cents a pound extra. Ice cream and cheese prices also will be higher.

A Locked Guard for Press

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Tight security will prevail at the legislature Monday as reporters are handed their advance copies of Premier Bill Bennett's "dynamite" budget.

Not since 1971 when W. A. C. Bennett refused the press the courtesy of traditional advance copies have such security measures surrounded a budget.

To give the press a chance to analyze the budget and prepare their stories, they are usually given copies ahead of time on the understanding no stories are released until the finance minister presents the budget to the house.

It's usually all done on the trust system.

But this year, Bennett has lost that trust.

The press will still get copies of the budget speech at 9 a.m.

But this time around, they will be locked under guard in the press gallery so not even a breath of what's in the budget will be released until it is presented to the legislature. (Full details of the budget will be carried in the final edition of Monday's Times which will appear for street sales soon after 3 p.m.)

The security hokum surrounding the budget is designed to whet journalistic — and hopefully, the public appetite for the "goodies" Finance Minister Evan Wolfe will unveil.

The Bennett administration has carefully trickled out vague hints and snatches of the budget contents in what is seen as an apparent prelude to a May election.

The fact that election speculation rumors won't die despite the federal election set for May 22 seems surprising at first, but the precedent has been set.

In 1949, B.C. went to the polls June 15, followed 12 days later by a national ballot.

Most political observers feel Bennett wanted to avoid parallel election campaigns at all costs.

But it is believed Bennett was too deep into his own election scenario when Prime Minister Trudeau made his surprise announcement Monday that he was going earlier than expected.

Most political observers are still predicting the budget will explode into an election a day or two after its introduction.

If Bennett drops the writ Tuesday or Wednesday or later that week at the Socred convention in Kamloops, B.C. will go to the polls the week of May 14, just one week ahead of the federal government.

The lengthy budget document that will take Wolfe in excess of two hours to read.

Hustler Eddie Cooking Books for Church

Times Staff

When Eddie Antonelli's father came from Italy to Prince Rupert 70 years ago he earned his living with a pick and shovel, helping dig basements for the fishing community's Roman Catholic church and bishop's house.

Today, Antonelli, 64, is helping build a new church there, not with a pick and shovel but with proceeds from a cook book called 'Ey — Eata You Fish, an expression his father used on his six children many a time at the meal table.

Antonelli — "Just call me the Codfather" — is still Canadian although he has lived in the U.S. for quite a while.

A successful wholesale fish dealer in Seattle, he is known all across the U.S. for his colorful comedy routines on television shows and telethons in which he promotes the fish industry and at the same time raises money for various charities.

As the second oldest child of a poor immigrant family, Antonelli began earning money when he was nine years old.

At that time, Prince Rupert had a legalised red light district.

The town's dog-catcher had a big flower garden and hired young Antonelli to take 12 bunches of flowers to the girls once a week to sell at 25 cents a bunch.

Antonelli got 25 cents for his trouble.

The system worked until Antonelli decided to up the sale price to 35 cents a bunch, keeping the extra $1.10 for himself.

On the next sales trip, he decked himself in a Jackie Coogan-type cap and made sure his shoes weren't too clean.

He added a soft-shoe routine to his sales pitch and was able to command 50 cents a bunch.

He then started to sell newspapers, (Antonelli says all the regular routes were given to "Protestant kids") by working out a strategy that got him out selling papers on the street before the competition.

He says the nuns who taught him at the Annunciation school must have wondered about the state of his kidmeys when, day in and day out, he had to go to the bathroom precisely 15 minutes before school was out.

Antonelli — "I was practically raised on the docks" — says he can recall when halibut sold for 25 cents a fish and were so plentiful that fishermen would throw the big ones back because they took up too much room.

By the time he was 12, he was using the fishermen to help fill the family coffers.

Putting on a sad, woe-begone face he'd stand around until someone gave him a fish to take home.

What they didn't know was that Prince Rupert restaurants were only too happy to serve fresh fish bought from the sad-faced youngster at an unbeatable price.

A keen sportsman, Antonelli had to leave school in the eighth grade and was no longer eligible to play on the school basketball team. So he started one of his own, calling it The League of Nations. The team won the city championships.

His first job was in the meat market of the dog-catcher's son. For a while he worked on the docks and and for a while he was a bouncer in an Italian club, working for tips which were far less than the pay his wife received.

In 1946, he and his wife lived in California while he worked as a studio cop in Hollywood, getting to know movie starts like John Wayne, Gene Autrey and Roy Rogers on a first name basis.

But the lure of the sea — and fish — was too great and after a year he left to come north. Unable to afford much equipment, he bought himself a cheap truck.

Getting in touch with his old fishing contacts and then began serving aboard various fishing vessels as a cook.

Antonelli says he would never have left Prince Rupert if he hadn't married his wife Gudrun (Goodie), who was a legal secretary and wanted to work elsewhere.

They moved to Vancouver using his promotional skills he started what was to turn out to be a highly successful wholesale fishery business.

Sme of the Codfather's favorite recipes remembered from his childhood are included in his book, which sells for $5.95. More sophisticated ones, gained in later years, are also included.

Antonelli, who calls himself "a product of the streets", says it's only poetic justice that the proceeds will help the community church which first gave his family a start.

Police Demand No Veto By City In Pay Dispute

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Victoria policemen want a city council commitment it will be bound by any contract settlement reached with the police board.

Otherwise, Sgt. Bryan Bailey warned Friday, there is a strong possibility of a strike.

He told a news conference mediator Clark Gilmour has been appointed to assist the parties but the union feels there is no way he will be able to resolve the issues.

"It is obvious that the (police) board is not prepared to meet our requests," Bailey said.

He said once the mediator has withdrawn, there are only two alternatives open to the 130-member union — go on strike or opt for binding arbitration.

Victoria police do not want to go on strike although they are prepared to do so if necessary, Bailey said.

The policemen are confident enough in their position to go the arbitration route, provided council is bound by the agreement as well as the police board.

They are convinced that if the agreement goes beyond the present cost guidelines set by the city, council will veto the pact.

Bailey referred to the situation in 1975 when Mayor Peter Pollen was chairman of the police board. The board and the union reached a settlement but then when it was put before council, aldermen vetoed it.

"We can't go that same route again," Bailey said.

He said he is delivering a letter to city hall asking for a meeting to get an assurance from council that it will be bound by any agreement reached with the board.

Bailey said the policemen are putting their case before the public and seeking Chamber of Commerce backing in order to put pressure on council to hear the policemen's case.

Chamber president Mel Cooper was present but said later he was only there as an interested observer and does not want to get involved on either side of the labor dispute.

One major issue in dispute is the policemen's demand for wage parity with their Vancouver counterparts plus three per cent.

Bailey said assuming Vancouver gets 10 per cent this year and adding the 3.5 per cent Victoria is already behind Vancouver. the extra three per cent for added workload and 2.5 per cent for the fringe benefits, the policemen's whole package works out to about 19 per cent over the previous agreement.

The extra cost to the city would be between $800,000 and $1 million.

Bailey produced statistics indicating the Victoria policeman's workload is 51-per-cent higher than his Vancouver counterpart.

"Victoria is no Sleepy Hollow anymore," he said.

In 1978, the Vancouver policeman handled 54.8 cases while in Victoria he handled 82.9.

The Victoria workload level has been rising sharply, being 15 per cent higher in 1976 and 41 per cent in 1977, Bailey said.

Yet a first-class constable in Victoria is paid $1,617 a month or $9.30 an hour, whereas the Vancouver policemen gets $1,674 a month or $9.62 an hour, a difference of 3.5 per cent.

Bailey said the crime rate in Vancouver in 1978 was 127.7 crimes for every thousand people, whereas in Victoria it was 188.3 — 47.5 per cent more crimes in Victoria on a per capita basis.

To field a policeman in Vancouver cost $33,192 in 1978 amd in Victoria it was $29,366, a difference of $3,[illegible]. Bailey said this means it would cost each taxpayer in Victoria another $8.13, or two cents a day, to bring Victoria up to par with Vancouver.

The board has offered the policemen 7.5 per cent in the one-year agreement. Bailey said this is totally unsatisfactory because it would put Victoria only 3.8 per cent ahead of Vancouver's 1978 rate and, according to the union's estimate, behind Saanich policemen who received a six-per-cent increase plus a cost-of-living allowance clause in this year's contract.

"The city of Victoria policemen's union believes this discrimination must end this year," Bailey said.

Campus Project Start Urged

Camosun College board will be asked Monday to approve and start a $5.9 million multi-purpose building on the Lansdowne campus.

The facilities and planning committee is recommending the college go ahead despite problems it faces acquiring the Paul Building and building a new parking lot.

A report to the board recommends a $25 bus pass subsidy each semester to encourage students to ride the bus.

The committee says the board should instruct administration to start the necessary demolition and site servicing.

Problems in obtaining the Paul Building from Greater Victoria school board and building a new parking lot on Lansdowne campus can be worked out while the new 103,428 square foot building is under construction.

If the board approves, Saanich will be asked to issue permits for construction.

A study of parking arrangements at other B.C. colleges and institutes shows Camosun parking facilities is the most overloaded except for East Kootenay College.

Proposals to ease the parking problem include arranging 365 stalls in several different locations and the eliminating of parking space around the Dunlop Building on the corner of Foul Bay and Lansdowne Roads.

When the college manages to acquire the Paul Building the parking areas could be enlarged by an additional 237 stalls in front and behind the building.

Letters sent earlier this month to the four core municipalities and the Capital Regional District requesting improvement in public transortation could have a significant impact on travel habits of students, according to the committee.

The committee suggests the board subsidize bus passes to a maximum of $25 a semester for students attending Lansdowne. The total cost per sememster would be between $20,000 and $25,000, the report said.

Committee members met with B.C. Hydro and found the company isn't prepared to establish any more routes in the near future. Current bus patterns emphasizing downtown rather than interurban travel will probably be in effect for another couple of years.

Woman Fair After Car Crash

A 23-year-old woman is in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital following an early morning traffic mishap in the 800-block Esquimalt Road.

Esquimalt police said Alison Joan Scorgie, of 394 Lampson, received multiple cuts, a broken wrist and possible internal injuries when the car she was driving slammed into a telephone pole on a curve.

Moments later another car hit the the wreckage, but the driver, Michael Leslie Province, 21, of 916 Claremont, and two unidentified passengers were unhurt.

The mishap occurred at about 2:30 a.m.

Petch Re-appointed

Dr. Howard Petch has been reappointed to another five-year term as president of University of Victoria.

He was the unanimous choice of a 17-member search committee of the UVic Board of Governors.

A spokesman for the board said Friday Petch's nomination received the backing of 89.9 per cent of the full-time faculty members.

Petch became president of UVic on Jan. 1, 1975 and his first term ends on June 30, 1980.

Under his leadership the university has undergone extensive expansion programs with the building of new residences, academic buildings, the University Centre, and with the opening of three new professional schools in law, nursing and social work.

New Site for Oil Tanks?

The half-moon harbor at Plumper Bay will be the new site of Greater Victoria's oil tank farm if Oak Bay Ald. Shirley Dowell has her way.

Dowell, who has spent the past couple of months looking for an appropriate site, says the bay, on the east side of Esquimalt Harbor in View Royal would be an ideal location.

Not only are there existing deep sea facilities and a railway line passing through the property, but tall trees on the fringes would afford a natural screen from the highway and nearby residences, she says.

There's an another tempting bonus, too. An oil tank farm, depending on its size, would reduce the View Royal homeowners' tax load by as much as one half, she says.

The 32-acre site is owned by Victoria Plywood which has operated a plant in Plumper Bay for years. Dowell says the company has indicated it would make the land available for sale or lease if the tank farm is approved.

She says she has spoken to the View Royal Advisory Planning Committee and while they have not said yes to the proposal, they at least have not said no.

Further talks are planned with residential groups and members of two Indian band councils in the area.

Federal, provincial, regional and municipal officials have spent nearly seven years trying to find a way of moving Greater Victoria's tank farms which are scattered over six locations occupying about 20 acres of waterfront in the Inner Harbor.

Several alternate sites have been suggested ranging from Duke Point in Nanaimo to Bamberton to a site near Helmcken and Trans Canada Highway.

The oil companies have said if they are forced to relocate out of the Greater Victoria area it would result in price increases on its products.

Dowell notes even a one cent increase in heating oil would cost Greater Victoria residents an additional $287,500 a year.

But that isn't the only reason for keeping the tank farm here, Dowell says. There are about 200 jobs at stake.

A decision on the tank farm site has to be made soon as leases expire on two of the existing properties — Chevron's on Harbor Road and Shell's on Songhees — in only two years time and won't be renewed. The lease on Gulf's depot on Songhees expires in 1987.

Two other companies, Texaco and Imperial, have depots on their own land.

All five have indicated they are prepared to move to a common site. The oil companies have estimated it will cost $12 million if three companies go on two sites. The cost would drop dramatically if they went onto one site, and be even lower if all five companies went together.

Sweeping Layoffs Hit Auxiliary Park Staff

Hundreds of parks branch employees have been laid off across Vancouver Island and the mainland.

A spokesman at the regional parks office at Nanaimo said he doesn't know why but said he suspects an overrun in the parks ministry budget.

"All I know we were instructed to lay off members of the auxiliary staff," he said.

Kerry Joy, in charge of nature interpretation and information, confirmed the layoffs and said it is because of a lack of funds.

Parks director Tom Lee, however, said it is not unusual to lay off people at the end of the budget year. He said he does not know how many people were affected.

"Once the new budget is approved, employees will be taken on again," he said.

The cancellation of the spring nature interpretation program for school children drew criticism from Douglas Turnbull, an executive of the Victoria Natural History Society.
